MISSING NAVAL SEAPLANE P.N. 19 FOUND

COMMANDER JOHN RODGERS CREW OF FOUR FOUND ALIVE

Navy Aviators Rescued Near Ithue, Island of Kauai, 64 Miles From Their Goal, Floated In Pacific Ocean For Nine Days—Started From San Francisco On August 31st.

Commander John Rodgers, captain of the missing naval seaplane PN19, No. 1, and his crew of four men were found alive Thursday evening 15 miles east of Kauai by the submarine R54.

Rodgers and his crew left San Francisco in an attempted nonstop flight to Honolulu on August 31.

The following afternoon, 24 hours after his seaplane, the PN-9 No. 1, hopped off the plane and crew disappeared about 300 miles from its destination.

Last message from the PN-9 No. 1, stated that its gasoline supply was about exhausted and a forced landing was expected.

The naval vessels stationed along course of the flight immediately took up the search for the plane, but nothing of the missing men was seen until Thursday night.

The island of Kauai is 64 miles west by northwest of the island of Oahu. Oahu, of which Honolulu is the principal city, was the destination of the big seaplane in its flight across the waters of the Pacific.

The plane was sighted floating shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon when the submarine R-4 started to meet the destroyers coming in from the fleet.

The submarine was commanded by Lieutenant Osborne, who, upon taking off Rodgers and his crew, immediately notified naval authorities saying the plane was in tow and would arrive in Pearl Harbor Thursday night.

Lieutenant Osborne's message other than saying the men were safe and well did not give their condition, simply saying he had taken the plane in tow.

It was off the coast of Kauai that the minesweeper Whippoorwill reported seeking flares a day or two after the search for the missing plane had started. A white flare and two red flares, or rockets were believed to have been seen immediately after a check of calculations the searching operations were transferred to this region, which was considerably outside of the zone previously searched.

When the news of the finding of Rodgers and his crew was confirmed by the navy, Honolulu papers issued extras and the people of the city went wild with joy, enacting scenes reminiscent of the armistice. White-clad sailors from the fleet, some of whom had been shipmates of the men of the PN-9 No. 1, mingled with civilians in an eager rush to obtain papers conveying the news.

Rodgers and his crew were in good health. This was indicated in a message intercepted by an amateur radio operator from Nawiliwili, which said, "Request tug be sent to Nawiliwili for Rodgers and crew who are in good health."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

After the conference the widows announced their meeting had resulted in an enduring friendship.

MILK INDUSTRY JOINS STATE IN CAMPAIGN

Question of Waste on Stream Pollution is Considered in Joint Session.

Milk industries of Ohio were well represented in the conference held Thursday in the senate chamber called by the state department of health to consider the milk plant waste problem in its effect on stream pollution.

After presentation of the problem in its general aspects by State Health Director John E. Monger and more especially by W. H. Dittoe, departmental chief engineer, and a discussion of the relative values of cooperative and individual efforts at solution by those present, John Schubach of Canton, representing the Ohio Milk Distributors' association, was elected temporary chairman and organization methods were considered.

Necessity for a friendly public opinion toward the milk industry was emphasized during the conference; stress was laid on the influence of the present dry season with its attendant low water supplies in creating difficulties for the industry, and it was pointed out that more complaints, proceeding often to the point of suits for damages or actions for injunction, are registered against the milk industry than against any other. There was unanimous agreement that cooperative effort is the best way to solve the problem and to eliminate these difficulties.

APPLE VENDER CONTESTS HIS BROTHER'S WILL

Suit Filed in Cincinnati Court to Control Estate of Morris S. Stone.

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 11 (UP).—Samuel Stone continued to burnish his apples here today and to hope that a Cincinnati court will break the will of his late brother, Morris Stone, formerly a wealthy Jewish leader of Cincinnati.

Under the terms of the disputed will Samuel was left only $60. So he employed Froome Morris, attorney, to handle the case. It so happens that Mrs. Adelaide, of London, England, had entered the battle. Samuel says that he never knew his brother had a wife and inclined to the belief that there is a dark gentleman in the woodpile somewhere.

The brothers are natives of Poland where their mother and other relatives reside. The will is said to have consisted chiefly of brief notations on irregularly torn pieces of wrapping paper in the dead man's safety deposit.

Sam said his brother was always referred to as the "bachelor." The Dayton man said the original family name was Bernstein, but that on coming to America the name Stone, was taken by them.

According to Sam if Morris had a wife he would have lived with her and provided for her, because he says he was a good man.

Bills, for Instance

Only trouble is, before marriage love is all. And after marriage so many other things crowd into the picture.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Crosley Radio News Service, Cincinnati, O.

SUPER-POWER broadcasting stations, that is, stations using 5,000 watts, should be remotely controlled. That is to say, they should be away from the centers of population.

The experience of Station WLW in Cincinnati is a case in point.

Permission was given to this station to use full strength following a number of successful experimental tests to ascertain if it would cause interference to radio fans in greater Cincinnati. No difficulty in "tuning out" the station was reported, due to the fact that the station is located 25 miles from Cincinnati.

SUPER-POWER will greatly overcome static interference, especially during the summer months. With super-power real distance will be possible and day-light reception will be good throughout the year.

Radio fans should experience no difficulty in radio reception from now on. Super-power will make the receivers with one, two or three tubes more valuable than ever before.

This use of super-power is a distinct step forward. The next step is to see that the super-power station is away from the congested centers.

Another advantage of super-power is that it will encourage the use of portable radio sets which will take entertainment to the ocean beach, to mountain camp, river and lake camp—the whole out-of-doors.

ONE of the important factors responsible for the increased use of radio receivers in the summer time is the policy of broadcasting stations to maintain a schedule of programs throughout the summer.

Radio is becoming less and less seasonal and the time is rapidly coming when radio reception will be just as good during the summer as it is during the winter; just as good during the day as it is during the night.

MARRIAGE

ORR-YAPLE.

Pencil blue satin made with a cape effect of white and gold applique, formed the bridal gown of Miss Clione Yaple, Saturday, when she became the bride of Mr. Fred Orr, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Orr, Columbus pike. The bride wore a beautiful corsage of pink rosebuds and delphinium.

A large company of guests was gathered at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Yaple, Kingston, to witness the ceremony. The service was read at 12 o'clock, the bride and groom standing before a background of garden flowers, which formed a temporary altar. Rev. T. C. Kerr, pastor of the Kingston Presbyterian church, officiated, using the Presbyterian ring ceremony.

After the ceremony the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated in pink and white asters and pink rosebuds, where a sumptuous four-course dinner was served by Emma Harris, cateress, and three assistants.

The bridal couple left immediately for a week's trip via auto to Cleveland, Sandusky and other northern points. The bride's traveling dress was a combination of black and blue flat crepe. She wore a hat to match.

Both bride and groom are graduates of the Kingston high school. The bride has taught in the Kingston grade schools for the past three years. The groom is a prosperous young farmer. Upon their return they will make their home on his father's farm on the Columbus pike.

Those present at the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Orr, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Orr, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Maxwell, Helen Orr and Elizabeth Orr, Columbus; Irene Orr, Virginia Lee Orr, Mrs. Mandane Lutz, Mrs. Hattie Ellis, Mrs. Adella Ashworth, Mrs. Effie Strait, Mrs. Ella Thomas, Bainbridge; Mrs. Elizabeth Hasselpluff, Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Yaple, and David C. Bennett, Columbus; Rev. T. C. Kerr and Mabel Miller.

Maine Buys Historic Forts for Public Parks

Portland, Maine.—Eight old forts on the coast of Maine, with ruined block-houses and grass-grown ramparts, have been bought by the state from the federal government in the last two years to be converted into parks of historic interest.

A bill proposing that the forts be sold to private persons was introduced in the senate in December, 1922. On hearing of it, Gov. Percival B. Baxter took immediate action. The cost of the forts and equipment and sites amounted to only $19,479.50. More, of course, will be needed for repairing the ruins and putting the reservations into good order, which means improving and strengthening sea walls. Proper signs will be placed for the guidance of visitors.

Other states are following the lead of Maine and are preparing to restore their old forts. These include Fort Vancouver in Washington, Harrod's fort in Kentucky and Fort Pike in Colorado.

EASING THE BURDEN OF STATE TAXATION

Banker Points Out Benefits of Community Property System in Some States.

Favorable aspects of tax systems are now among the most highly prized assets of our states, it is pointed out in the American Bankers Association Journal in connection with an article on how California, which has never had a state income tax, cuts state and Federal death taxes nearly in half by the "community property" system. L. H. Roseberry, Vice President Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, author of the article, says that a recent amendment to the tax law enables future residents of the state to take advantage of it. Reference is made to a former article by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey, voicing the need for death tax reform and citing a hypothetical case involving California inheritance taxes which might have been levied in 1920. Since that time the laws have been changed, Mr. Roseberry declares, so that the figures then given do not correctly represent the present situation. He says:

"Ever since its admission California has had the 'community property' system. Eight other states have a similar system. 'Community property' is property accumulated by married persons during their marriage, except that which is acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance. Approximately 65 per cent of all property in the state is 'community property.' Such property in California enjoys the most favorable position in regard to death taxes, both state and Federal, of any state in the Union (excepting possibly the eight other states having a similar property system) including states boasting of no inheritance tax whatever. The California 'community property' system is recognized for the purpose of levying Federal estate taxes, and only one-half of it is now so taxed, while in Florida the whole estate of a decedent is subject to the Federal levy.

How the Law Works

"California's law expressly provides that upon the death of either husband or wife, testate, only one-half of their net 'community property' shall be subject to inheritance taxes. The same exemption applies upon the death of the husband, intestate, while the whole net 'community property' is totally exempt from all state inheritance taxation upon the death of the wife intestate. The Federal estate tax law now follows precisely the California law in this respect.

"As the result of an amendment made to the California inheritance tax law by the 1925 Legislature, this immunity from state inheritance taxes likewise now extends to 'community property' of non-resident married persons, who hereafter take up their legal residence in the state. This puts 'community property' in a more favorable position regarding death taxes than exists in any other state in the Union, with the possible exception of the other community property states. This extension of the exemption will add 15 per cent to property in the state coming under this definition, which means that approximately 80 per cent of all property probated in California will enjoy the lightest death taxes in America.

"To illustrate, the following example of a man survived by a wife and two minor children is computed, the estate consisting of 'community property' all left by will to the wife and children. One-half of such property would go under the law to the wife without any death taxes, and the other half only would be subject to both state inheritance and Federal estate taxes.

"As a subject of comparison, take a state which has no inheritance tax, such as Florida. If the comparison were made with the states which impose inheritance taxes but do not have the 'community property' system, the advantage in favor of California would even be more striking.

Estate of $100,000	Total Tax
California	None
Non-inheritance-tax state	$500
Advantage in favor of California	500
Estate of $200,000	Total Tax
California	905
Non-inheritance-tax state	3,000
Advantage in favor of California	2,095
Estate of $400,000	Total Tax
California	5,770
Non-inheritance-tax state	13,000
Advantage in favor of California	7,230
Estate of $1,000,000	Total Tax
California	1,249,157
Non-inheritance-tax state	2,543,500
Advantage in favor of California	1,294,343

"If the two children were adults the California tax would be increased only $250 in each case.

Another New Amendment

"Another feature of the recent amendment to the California inheritance tax law is a section fixing the inheritance taxes on stock in California corporations owned by non-residents at a flat sum of 2 per cent on their actual value. When considered in conjunction with the ruling that no inheritance taxes can be levied upon any stock in foreign corporations, or upon bank accounts, bonds, notes, debentures, or similar securities belonging to a non-resident but located in the state at the time of such non-resident's decease, it will be observed that at present the inheritance tax situation in California is most favorable, both to non-residents who have property in this state and to married people who live here or who may subsequently move here from elsewhere."

REPLACING CAKES AND CANDIES WITH JEWELS, LACES AND BOUTONNIERES

Tin Boxes on Which Charming Designs Have Been Lithographed.

THE ornamental tin boxes in which one may now buy candies, dainty cakes, candied fruits, and the like, are a far cry from the days when such confections used to be carried home in paper bags. The attractive tin receptacles of today have value not only in the fact that they keep their contents fresh, but that they are real ornaments which will grace any library-table or buffet.

Nor does their value end there. Emptied of their edible contents, they may be put to numerous uses. Charming jewel boxes may be made of them; also boxes to hold handkerchiefs, gloves, ribbons, laces, or cigarettes.

Their lacquered decorations are so colorful and artistic that they will fit into almost any color-scheme. To make one of these pretty tin boxes over into a jewelry case, a pad of cotton wadding should be cut to fit the bottom of the box. Over this and around the sides should be carefully glued a velvet lining, in one of the colors used on the exterior decoration of the box. Thus padded and lined it appears to have been destined from the first to serve as a casket for beautiful jewels.

Satin linings are perhaps more suitable for the boxes that are to hold handkerchiefs, gloves, ribbons, etcetera. In these no wadding will be necessary. The satin lining should be cut to fit exactly the sides and bottom of the box, stretched smoothly over these surfaces and glued with care. In working with fine fabric use the best quality glue so there will be no discoloring and the surfaces will adhere smoothly and permanently.

If a cigarette box is desired, it is better to use a square or oblong tin box. As a cigarette container it need not be lined, although it would not be inappropriate to do so. Perhaps a lining of taffeta silk would be best, because fragments of tobacco would not cling to it.

as they might to a satin surface. The box, with its prettily decorated cover, would be a pleasing addition either to the library table or to the dressing-table in milady's boudoir. For the latter, one should be selected that is done in light, dainty colorings; while a box of Oriental colors and design would be best suited to the library or a man's "den."

In selecting a lining for any of these boxes, it would be well to choose from the less dominant colors on the cover. For instance, where there is an Oriental design in rich red, blue and yellow, with the red predominating, the blue note had best be repeated in the lining. Or perhaps a box of Japanese design will be done in black and silver. Here a contrasting lining would be artistic, such as a pale green, or a bright Chinese red.

The work of adapting these lovely boxes to new uses is a fascinating one. They would make delightful Christmas gifts, with perhaps a sample enclosed of the article they are designed to hold—in the handkerchief-box, a dainty kerchief of fine linen; a pair of gloves in the glove-box; cigarettes neatly placed in the box intended for that use; in the jewel-box, one of the dainty, pastel-colored pearl necklaces now so inexpensive but popular. Not, however, that any enclosure would be expected. For any one of these pretty boxes, neatly and artistically lined, would be a charming gift in itself.

These ornamental tin boxes may be procured in almost any candy-store or bakery. In tin boxes hard candy will keep fresh and dry and may be preserved for a long time. The tin cake-boxes usually hold fruit cakes, since it is desirable to keep them for an indefinite time. In this type of container the cakes will remain fresh and delicious. Such boxes of cakes or candies may be kept on the table in the boudoir, or on the dining-room buffet. They will be found extremely handy, and as attractive as they are useful. They are a good investment.

A most attractive gift to a movie fan would consist of a group of boxes, each decorated with the face of a popular and celebrated screen actress, each lined to match some color note of the boudoir and each labeled on the outside of the box below the lid with the name of the article for which intended, such as gloves or jewels.

FISH WALKS ON 8 HANDS; FOUND IN SARGASSO SEA

Specimen Brought Back by Beebe, Leader of Arcturus Expedition—Romantic Yarns Punctured.

New York.—A fish with a transparent pane over its stomach through which its whole internal mechanism can be seen, a fish that walks with eight hands, a fish illuminated with thousands of pinpoints of light and a devilish 18 feet across are among the specimens of marine life brought back on the ocean-going scientific laboratory Arcturus from its expedition to the Sargasso sea and the Pacific.

Dr. William Beebe, leader of the party of fourteen scientists who dredged, fished, preserved and painted thousands of specimens of oceanic life during the 12,000-mile journey, was enthusiastic over the results achieved.

Except for storms which cleared the Sargasso sea and prevented finding certain varieties of seaweed which were sought, the expedition obtained good results.

The party ended its fishing activities about 100 miles from New York, at the foot of an undersea cliff 930 feet high over which the Hudson thundered 2,000,000 years ago in a greater waterfall than any now existing on earth, said Doctor Beebe. Some of the most remarkable species were found here.

The Sargasso sea, declared Doctor Beebe, has been greatly romanticized by writers. Stories of ships imprisoned in the floating weeds he called legends.

Instead of floating prairies, the expedition found only patches of floating seaweed.

Plan to Mark Site of Historic Logan House

Altoona, Pa.—Efforts are being made by local and other historical societies to mark appropriately the spot of the historic old Logan house, which will be razed to make way for a new railroad station. It was in a room in the old house that the Union war governors, in September, 1862, met with President Lincoln and pledged him their faith and support.

The meeting was informal and private, no written record of any kind was kept and newspaper reporters were not present. It was called to take measures for more active support of the government and resulted in the pledge to Lincoln and the Union. The pledge was signed by 13 governors and endorsed by a number of others not at the conference.

Among the signers were A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania; John A. Andrew, Massachusetts; Richard Yates, Illinois; Israel Washburn, Jr., Maine; Samuel J. Kirkwood, Iowa; William Sprague, Rhode Island; F. H. Pierpont, Virginia; David Todd, Ohio; N. S. Berry, New Hampshire, and Austin Blair, Michigan.

Odd Names for Peaks, Canyons Upset Utah

Salt Lake City.—Utah residents are aroused over chance and possibly inappropriate names bestowed upon many of the peaks and canyons in the south Utah region which includes Zion National park, Cedar Breaks State park and Bryce canyon national monument.

Suggestion has been made that a commission be appointed to take up the matter with the national geographic board of the United States.

Report from Zion National park is that a woman tourist while riding through a rock crack recently remarked "this must be Purgatory pass"—and the name has stuck. Another instance which has created disapproval is the calling of the majestic triplet-peaks of the Three Patriarchs in Zion park by the name of a nationally known concern.

A majority of the peaks and canyons in south Utah region are unnamed—there are so many of them—and it is hoped that something will be done toward proper naming before too many nicknames are given.

Gas Masks for Ponies and Pigeons Tested by Army

New York.—Devices resembling feed bags, but which keep out gas rather than keep in grain, have been used on polo ponies in connection with the testing of new types of army gas masks at Governors island.

A polo pony wearing a cloth bag that looked like a feed bag over its nostrils and upper jaw walked unharmed through clouds of mustard gas after a gas grenade had been discharged nearby.

Two carrier pigeons, not required to wear individual masks, but protected by a gas-proof cage, went through the tear gas ordeal perfectly. One of the birds was a cousin of the famous carrier pigeon President Wilson, which lost an eye and a leg, but carried a message to the lost battalion in the Argonne.

Nails 100 Years Old Found Near Site of Fort

Ridgefield, Wash.—Century-old nails, laboriously forged by hand, were found here recently, near the site of the old Hudson's Bay company block-house, erected in 1825 to care for the fur trade of the Columbia river and its tributaries. The nails were in a stout wooden box of material two inches thick. It is believed the nails were lost in transferring the material from boats to the fort. Some of the square, greenish iron spikes were used in an airplane hangar being erected here by the army.

Snake and Lizard Skin for Chapeau

Visored Hat Is Fashionable With Sports Dress; Many Colors in Leather.

It was while the artists who design sports clothes for the smart set were busy with outfits to be worn at the races that the visor hat was suggested, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times. There is no hint of the conventional in the genuine visored cap, the jockey's proper head-piece, though it has been adopted to many sorts of hats, made to protect the eyes, for both men and women.

But now that the sports suit has a definite place in artistic dress, the visored hat represents the last word in style. It is modified, of course, and feminized, the visor being really just a suggestion of the original.

Models worn by the younger English women who go in for clothes of that type are snappy and extreme in their prettiness, and are made of leather, cloth, suede or felt, or a cloth to match the suit. Very swagger little affairs are of snake skin and of lizard skin. It would require a naturalist's knowledge to tell just what species of reptile supplied the skin, but they are of different kinds, markings and shadings, fine and delicate and lovely. Gray and olive tinted skins are stylish.

Once you go into the leathers for sports hats selection is large and varieties attractive. Browns, tans and yellows are popular, for the English sportswoman knows the value of rich browns and all of the shades to set off a fresh complexion. The little round shapes in brown kid are modish, and the "melon" shape is the most fashionable this season, precisely that we see in the best sports shops at home.

One much featured at a prominent London establishment is made of brown glove kid with tiny visored brim of bright yellow suede. Another of these is especially attractive, the crown being of finely marked gray snake skin, the narrow trim showing the smallest visor outline in front, of jade green cloth, bound with dark gray kid. A hat of the more flashy sort, yet very smart, has a crown of gilt kid and brim of brown suede bound with a line of scarlet kid. These hats are much worn for motoring. One sees many of them at athletic events about London to which women drive.

Many other styles in hats to be worn with sports dress are made of different materials. Those in rough fancy straws are particularly pretty and will be seen late in England where women do not mark the seasons as definitely in their dress as we do. Open weaves of straw dyed the most vivid colors are shown in close shapes having more brim than the regular cloche, just like the late summer hats in New York, but always with the down line. These are embroidered with crevells in gay flowers clustered in front and around the crown. They are quaint yet chic and have the advantage of going well with different sorts of dress, with the knitted jumper frocks, a tweed suit or a practical crepe or voile.

The material in these hats has an especial interest for Americans because it is that open, glossy sort of which we have heretofore made mats and baskets. It takes beautifully the most brilliant dye and is light as a feather. American visitors appear to be seizing upon these unusual, picturesque hats which will do charmingly for the southern winter resorts, and, no doubt, carry on for next early summer.

New Caplike Hat Late Feature in Millinery

Smart Gloves and Hose

Gloves and stockings must be an exact match whenever possible, while the handbag should repeat the main color theme of the dress. Black silk stockings are more and more seen with an all-black toilette for daytime as well as evening wear; and even in the afternoon a dressy toilette is finished with black satin walking shoes. Apparently the forthcoming vogue is for darker stockings, which are putting in a more and more frequent appearance.

HIS THOUGHTS

Bride—And you think of nothing but me?
Groom—Nothing but you, my dear. nothing but you.

Bride—And what at this very moment?
Groom—Why, I was thinking that you might be thinking that I was thinking it must be near dinner time, my love.—Chicago Daily News.

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

Take me back to Peaceful Valley
To the good old "handset" day,
When we juggled with the galley
In the good old-fashioned way,
Where the editor and devil
Swapped tobacco to and fro
And they all were on a level,
And were comrades, don't you know.

All your high-falutin' presses
And your linotypes and such,
And your new attractive "dresses"
Don't amount to very much
To a feller educated
'Mid the romance of a day
When the paper was created
In the good old "handset" way.

When a fightin' man meandered
In to clean up on the shop,
Makin' claims that he'd been slandered
And we never called a cop;
When the boys would all unlimber
Mallet, wrench and shootin' stick
And would chase him to the timber
At a pace that made him sick.

When we always had a column
Of obituary stuff
That was full of rhyme so solemn
It was plenty good enough
For each old delinquent brother
As he saw fit for to die.
No use settin' up another,
So we used the old standby.

When the "extra quick edition"
Was a thing we never knew
Under any old condition,
And the heads were mighty few.
With no hurry and no bustle,
Till it came to Friday night,
When we'd all turn in and hustle
Some to get the sheet out right.

What a wealth of young ambition,
When we got our first real place,
A most glorified position—
That of workin' at the case.
There is where we got our knowledge
In the good old-fashioned way,
Didn't have to go to college
In the good old "handset" day.

—Roy K. Moulton.

FIRST WATER PEARLS FOUND ON SKELETONS

Helmets, Tortoise Shell Ornaments, Pottery and Beads Unearthed.

Chillicothe, O., Sept. 11 (UP).—Armed guards patrolled the Price mound in the ancient Seip group near Bainbridge, Ohio, today following discovery of additional valuable relics of mound builders during excavations under the direction of Curator Harry C. Shetrone of the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Museum, Columbus.

Thousands of pearls, many of them retaining their fine lustre; copper helmets, tortoise shell and silver ornaments, pottery, beads and other rare burials have been unearthed.

Excavation was continued today with the expectation of finding other deposits.

Curator Shetrone has named the mound "The burial of Pearls." Shetrone said he believed the mounds were built by a tribe of Indians that inhabited this section several thousand years ago.

Four pearl bedecked skeletons, have been unearthed.

LAWYERS CAN DO IT.

Courts and lawyers can do more toward the elimination of crime than the combined influences of churches and ethical societies of whatsoever character, and this statement invites to no disparagement of these noble moral agencies.

Much has been said and written concerning crime suppression, multitudes of suggestions have been offered innumerable formulas proposed. Social activity practically has exhausted itself in efforts to meet this issue. It could be settled within 30 days!

The attorney general of the United States and former Secretary of State Hughes both referred to this matter in their speeches before the annual bar association. In simplest terms, their advice and admonition amounted to this: Elevate the standard of the bar; make lawyers evangelists of good citizenship; eliminate that sinister element among lawyers which lacks appreciation of and fidelity to the ethics of what, in theory at least, is recognized as earth's noblest profession—get rid of the publicity seeker, the shyster, the avid money-grubber, the vile legal spawn recognized by the underworld as "mouthpieces."

A regenerated bar and bench would inaugurate an era of exact justice; criminals would be defended in harmony with the spirit of the constitutional guarantee, but they would not be able to find legal assistance that would do more than to assure to them a fair trial. Under such an order the guilty would find no one for hire to compass his deliverance. Under such an order courts would function with such dispassionate rectitude as would appall the now insolent criminal hordes who rely upon legal delay, evasions, technicalities, political and other improper influence.

In a recent statement to the public Mark O. Prentice, of the National Crime commission, said that the legal profession was chiefly responsible for existing crime conditions, which show the "complete collapse" of the administration of criminal justice. Criminals go unpunished.

Mr. Prentice said: "The lawyers now have the chance to do something more than merely make a gesture. For a generation the bar association of cities, states and the nation have met periodically, passed resolutions deploring crime conditions—and have done nothing else. It is easy to pass the responsibility on to the legislatures, but the answer to that is that the legislature of practically every state is made up, very largely, of lawyers, generally from 65 to 90 per cent and any time they choose to discard the accepted alignments of party politics and create a new alignment of those who favor modern criminal codes to cope with modern criminality they can accomplish it."

Chief Justice Taft, on his return from a study of English criminal jurisprudence, indicated a similar view.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

For Sombre Music

The saxophone was designed at the start to play religious music. Its sombre tones were for serious things. In fact, Mendelssohn found it so mournful that he wouldn't allow it to be played in any of the orchestras he conducted.—Exchange.

Rome's Ancient Name

Ancient Rome had an older, more mysterious name, which it meant death to pronounce. It is said to have been "Valentia," which was translated into Greek "Roma" to circumvent the penalty for uttering the Latin word.

Use of Dependable Disinfectants Urged

Proper Sanitation Essential With Farm Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the disinfection of premises and buildings and in preparing dips for live stock, products of known dependability are essential for satisfactory results. This timely counsel is issued by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in connection with a recent ruling which requires cattle owners to disinfect their premises before the government will pay indemnity for animals found to be tuberculous.

For many years the bureau has conducted extensive research and thousands of field tests with dips and disinfectants. Accordingly, it is prepared to give detailed information on the subject. Live stock owners may consult the bureau's veterinary inspectors or may obtain suitable bulletins dealing with disinfection and sanitation on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Disinfectants differ greatly in their effectiveness against various disease organisms and parasites. Hence it is essential, first, to select one known to be suitable for the particular purpose in view and, secondly, to use it in the proper strength. When commercial preparations are used, it is usually the part of economy to select a standard product. The cost of the materials is small in most cases compared with the item of labor in doing the work, and a few cents saving by purchasing an inferior product may reduce greatly the thoroughness of the disinfection.

Sanitation is an important principle in keeping live stock and poultry healthy, and a small quantity of disinfectant kept on hand will often prevent serious losses. Prompt disinfection of barbed wire scratches and cuts is one instance of such practical aid aside from the more extensive use in the disinfection of buildings and yards.

Some Advantages Given by Winter Cover Crops

Winter cover crops give returns five ways. They will preserve the existing fertility. There is always some plant food left from the fertilizer applied in the spring and much of this will leach away unless there is a crop growing to take it up. Second, the cover crop helps to prevent the loss of soil and plant food by erosion. Third, the cover crop when turned under will fill the soil with organic matter making it easier to till and increasing its water-holding capacity. Fourth, leguminous cover crops when turned under will add more nitrogen per acre than is ever likely to be applied at one time in commercial fertilizers. A good crop of vetch or crimson clover will furnish more nitrogen than 300 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda. Fifth, cover crops will furnish an abundant yield of high grade hay which may be cut at a time when the farm is apt to be getting short of feed.

Treatment Required for Blackcap Raspberries

Practically the only different treatment required for the blackcap raspberries is in the pruning. The black cap varieties form new plants where the tips of the canes touch the ground. These canes have to be cut back so they may be supported on wires or tied to stakes. The canes should be cut back to about 30 inches or so in the spring.

After the fruit is gathered, all fruiting canes should be cut out close to the ground and burned. This is to get rid of diseases or insects that may be on them. It is always better to cultivate a raspberry patch, but a mulch assists in keeping the fruit clean. Three to six canes are sufficient for a hill. Too many raspberry patches are ruined by allowing them to produce too many canes and plants.

Farm Hints

Will you have a green straw stack this fall?

Most farmers fall with alfalfa from too thick seeding.

Culling poultry is one of the best-paying jobs on the farm.

Rats can be largely eliminated by constantly making the farm a disagreeable place for them.

Keeping farm accounts is one of the most important activities on a successful farm. Don't neglect them during the busy season.

The corn harvester and the potato digger should come in for their share of attention long before it seems necessary. Then they'll be ready on time.

A short hay crop means less to handle and more dollars to the ton, which is all very well except for the farmer who planned on a large crop to feed his stock.

Studies made of all trees in a 40,000-acre German forest show that oak trees were most frequently struck by lightning. Beech, birch, and maple were almost never struck.

Gratifying Ambition

The ambitious person must rise early and sit up late, and pursue his design with a constant, indefatigable attendance.

Mrs. George Targee In Critical Condition—Took Corrosive Sublimate.

Chillicothe, Sept. 9.—Mrs. George Targee of East Main street, is in a critical condition as the result of taking three or four bichloride of mercury tablets by mistake early Tuesday morning. This official statement discounts earlier reports that Mrs. Targee had attempted suicide.

According to reports, Mrs. Targee arose Tuesday morning about 1:30 o'clock to take some medicine, when she obtained the mercury tablets by mistake. She became very ill and Dr. John Franklin was called. He used the stomach pump and administered antidotes, working with the patient for several hours.

While her condition was improved Tuesday afternoon, it was still regarded as critical.

The husband of Mrs. Targee is a member of the Eagle ball team of this city.

INVESTIGATION

Of Shenandoah Catastrophe To Start Soon.

Washington, Sept. 10.—(UP.)—A court of inquiry to hear evidence on the Shenandoah disaster and to establish officially the cause of the catastrophe, will convene at Lakehurst as soon as possible, according to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

The court will be composed of naval officers appointed by Wilbur and will include one or more aeronautic experts. It will consist of a separate body of officers from those comprising the board of inquiry which met at Caldwell, Ohio, last week to determine the cause of the death of the 14 men who were killed.

All testimony of investigators at the wreck will be heard at the inquiry and parts of the wreckage shipped to Lakehurst from Caldwell will be examined.

Wilbur is seriously considering opening the entire procedure to newspaper representatives and possibly to the public.

Earth Fires Cause Alarm

Villagers are alarmed at Poremeu, France, by a natural phenomenon occurring in a ravine close to the railroad of Beziers, where the ground has become so hot that it burns the feet of anybody trying to stand still. Clouds of heavy black smoke are rising from fissures in the rocks, while in some spots a thick, oily substance oozes from cracks in the ground and evaporates as soon as it gets in contact with the air, leaving everything covered with a shiny black, hard coating. The geological formation of the Aveyron district is volcanic in origin, but this appears to be the first sign of subterranean activity since prehistoric times. Scientists are proceeding to the spot to investigate. Pending a report, it is suggested that a stratum of lignite which exists in many parts of Aveyron may have become incandescent.—Family Herald.

Tahiti Talks of Dropping

Use of the French Franc
Papeete, Tahiti.—The instability of the French franc has revived talk in Tahiti of establishing a local unit of value independent of the fluctuations of the franc. Opinion is expressed that as Tahiti is so remote from France, and is in the position of having a constant credit trade balance, the financial difficulties of the home country should not be allowed to unsettle values and disturb business in this colony.

As a matter of fact, the money used in the colony is a local paper currency issued by the Tahiti branch of the Banque d'Indo-Chine, but it fluctuates in sympathy with the franc.

A settled form of money is the only thing necessary to usher in the period of great prosperity to the island. Both the vanilla and copra yields are increasing and are commanding good prices.

FLAPPERS ARE OLD
AS RACE'S HISTORY

Have Been Common in Every Race and Class.

There is nothing new under the moon. The flapper of today is one with Tyre and Nineveh. Away in the incredible years when the first foundation slab of the Sphinx was laid, the Egyptian flapper was interfering with the process of its future by furtive glances cast on impressionable members of the board of works of the pharaohs.

Cleopatra was a flapper. Shakespeare talks of her "hopping 40 paces down the public street." No one but a flapper could have adopted such a method of progression. Her freak of putting a valuable pearl in acid was sheer flapperishness.

Helen of Troy was a girl of many destructive impulses. She would have run at any cost. Hence the wooden horse and the fall of Troy.

At a little later period the skittish Venus was in the same capricious form when she prevailed upon the "Pious Aeneas" to break his journey with her.

Horace in his songs invokes the name of Lalage and other maidens. It is safe to assume that two-thirds of them were little canaries who coyly responded to the lyrical advances of the Latin nightingale.

In the heroic days the Grecian flappers took much more exercise than their Roman sisters. They were the forerunners of the modern sports girl.

Here it may be well to indicate that flappers are not confined to any one class of communities, ancient or modern. They are just as frequent among the plebs as among the patricians.

There is not the faintest doubt that ill-fated Marie Antoinette, in her early years at the French court, was an enchanting flapper.

Another most unhappy woman, Mary Queen of Scots, was so full of espiègle and fascination that John Knox, in Puritan Scotland, found her an easy victim to stern-browed persecution.

Louise de la Valliere was not the obvious type, but she was a type of flapper none the less. She was quite a little bird who attracted the long devotion of a fastidious king in a few flights. Her friend, Mlle. de Tonnyay-Charente, afterwards Mme. de Montspoon, was a bird of brighter methods, but both were of the order seduisante that captures kings and clerks alike.

More hoydenish and daring than either of them was the gallant sister of Charles II, later Duchess d'Orleans. Charles' sister was as gay and lark as the most up-to-date New York fun seeker. She loved to dress in the apparel of men, as girls of today adore appearing in mock-masculine garb at fancy dress dances.

Neil Gwyn was the very pink of flappers. Her smiles were as restorative as her oranges; and her kisses would have bucked up a regiment. Nell remained a flapper until the end. She never lost the art of her grinning. Impudent girlhood. Charles was a mighty good judge of the fair sex; and it is significant that he gave his best devotion to the queen and pride of flappers.—Book Notes.

Early Protestants

The name "Huguenots" was given to French followers of Calvin, Protestant leader of the Reformation. They suffered massacre at Vassy by the party of Guise in 1562. This act led to the civil wars, which continued until the Edict of Nantes in 1598, when civil and religious liberty was confirmed to them. The massacre of St. Bartholomew occurred August 24, 1572, during a truce in the wars. The power the Huguenots gained as a political party following the edict was of short duration, being destroyed in a few years by Louis XIII and his minister, Richelieu. Louis XIV, in 1685, revoked the Edict of Nantes, and as a result half a million Huguenots fled to England, Germany, the Netherlands, Switzerland and America.—Kansas City Star.

Found It Easy to Forgive

"You know the feeling, that flush of anger that comes over you when you're driving peacefully along a country road and suddenly hear a familiar sharp report," said the motorist. "You begin to curse and ask yourself why you didn't change that tire. Well, I was driving near the Oakland Hills Country and Golf club recently and all of a sudden 'Bang!' I got out to see which tire it was. They were all O. K. Then up comes a beknickered chap and starts apologizing for something. 'Sorry,' says he, 'sort of missed my aim and drove my pill into your rear fender.' Sure enough there was a dent in the fender and the ball was a short distance away. I was only too glad to forgive him."—Detroit News.

To Aid Children

Knights of Youth, a new order whose purpose is the ethical training of school children, has been introduced in 12 public schools of New York city. Nearly 1,000 children are enrolled in the ranks of knighthood in one school. This order acclaims character as the knight's noblest quest, and it was formed to combat the increase in juvenile crime. It is sponsored by the National Child Welfare association.

STATE DRY

AGENT ON TRIAL

FOR PERJURY

Cleveland, Sept. 9.—(UP.)—State Dry Agent W. J. Patrick was placed on trial here today, charged with perjury in connection with a dry raid on the home of State Senator George H. Bender, at Cleveland Heights.

First steps looking to a grand jury investigation of the raid, demanded by Senator Bender, was seen in the presence of attaches of the county prosecutor's office.

Patrick was arraigned in Justice of the Peace Chizek's court. He is accused of swearing to a false affidavit upon which Justice of the Peace Stanton Addams of East Cleveland, issued a warrant to search Bender's home.

Guy O. Farquharson, Bender's attorney, contends the law expressly forbids magistrates to issue search warrants for bona fide dwellings unless knowledge of sale of liquor is sworn to by the applicant for the warrant.

The Bender raid was made on the basis of an anonymous "tip," later found to have been given to Patrick by a patrolman.

FORMER JUDGE

GRAHAM DEAD

Denver, Colo., Sept. 9.—(UP.)—Royal R. Graham, former U. S. district judge and candidate for juvenile judge against Judge Ben B. Lindsey, last term, was found dead in his home shortly before noon today.

The former judge figured prominently in a recent recount of ballots for the juvenile judgeship here several months ago. Judge Lindsey finally winning the office. He was the alleged klan candidate for the office and the subject of many charges concerning the election.

Six gas jets were turned on in the room in which Graham was found by Roy C. Wilson, deputy city attorney, who went to the Graham home when he failed to appear at police court this morning where he had a case pending. All the windows were closed and the telephone had been disconnected.

College and Cathedral

Christ church, the largest and most notable of Oxford (Eng.) colleges, is in the fifth century of its existence. For reasons of convenience the celebration already had been held, so the true birthday anniversary of this curious institution, which is both a college and a cathedral and yet is called a church, passed quietly during the long vacation.

Modern investigation has revealed a remarkable continuity in the history of English ecclesiastical foundations. The Saxons built their churches on the ruins of the great Roman temples, and the Normans in their turn rebuilt the Saxon churches.

This continuity is most remarkable in Oxford, where nearly every college has grown out of a medieval monastery. Christ church stands on the site of a priory, a parish church and at least two older monastic colleges. Its bells were removed from a neighboring abbey, and both the stones and the funds used in its construction were obtained from the dissolution of more than forty monastic foundations.

Long-Buried Tree

Rolla Fallon, employed at the Glenn Ayr mine, near Terre Haute, Ind., was digging coal with a pick 200 feet below the surface and more than a quarter of a mile back in the mine, late in March, when he struck a substance that was firmly embedded in the coal. He picked at it until a piece, more than one foot long fell out, disclosing a well-developed tree trunk with limb formations still intact. The whole tree appears to be in the coal. He took the wood to Terre Haute and will send it to the state museum at Indianapolis for further scientific research. The wood oozes water and is spongy instead of petrified, as would be supposed. The find is attracting considerable attention from miners.

WHEN THE, ETC.

When the class goes for a picnic and they find a sylvan glade, And somebody tips the barrel that contains the lemonade, And some one falls from the hammock and the teacher wants to swear But must smile with saintly patience, when a twig pulls off her hair, O, it's then that hearts are joyous and it's then that life is gay When the class all gets sun-blistered on its happy picnic day, And you sit down to dinner but you rise to frown and sigh For the bugs are in the ice cream and the ants are in the pie.

AMUSEMENTS

The feature picture at the Metropolitan theater is one of the fastest moving comedy romances the screen has seen in many a long day.

Richard Dix in John Monk Saunders' Liberty Magazine serial, "The Shock Punch"—a real he-man star, directed by Paul Sloane, who made "Too Many Kisses."

"The Shock Punch," adapted for the screen by Luther Reed, centers around Dix, in the role of Randall Lee Savage. He is afraid that his life of ease and luxury will tend to make him "soft" and hires a couple of professional pugilists to keep his pep up and his waistline down.

During the course of training, Savage develops a terrific blow, a "shock punch." Just a taste of it means curtains for the receiver. Savage is called to bring the blow into play several times—once when his father gets his trainers to "fix" a fight for Dix at an ironworker's ball. The old gent doesn't believe his son has it in him and almost passes out when a bullying steel worker hits the floor with a thud before the youngster.

But there is one drawback. Dorothy, "the only girl in the world" for Savage, detests anything that has to do with prize fighting, and she makes Randall promise not to fight for her sake, and this sort of puts the boy in a funny position when he gets a job as rivetter on a building Dorothy's father is constructing. The men take to playing jokes on him—"the dude," they call him, and he has to bring them around now and then with a gentle reminder in the form of the "shock punch," later apologizing to the girl.

While on the job, Savage learns that the foreman and the engineer are working against their boss. Dorothy's father, who must finish the steel work on the building by a given date. He overhears their plan to send the girder which is to complete the work, crashing thru from the topmost story. He rides up on the girder himself, which slips (all this had been arranged by the foreman) and almost falls, but Savage reaches the top and before the beam even lands, he is off and on top of the crooked foreman. The old "shock punch" goes over to the point of his chin, and it's all over but the shouting.

Here's a picture with the "punch" in every sense of the word.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON "GOLD BONDS"

"Before I go to the bank to ask advice about investing the money mother left me, I wish you would tell me something more about bonds," said Helen to Aunt Emmy. "Am I right in thinking that gold bonds are absolutely safe? Are gold bonds what people mean by gilt edge securities?"

"What a child it is!" laughed Aunt Emmy. "I can see that you do need to learn something about bonds. The term 'gold bond' does not have anything to do with the term 'gilt edged security.' The latter is nothing more than a commonly used phrase that means a safe security. Companies that issue gold bonds usually agree to redeem them in United States gold coin of the weight and fineness of the gold coin issued by the United States Treasury at the time the bonds are put on the market. This is done in order to protect the bondholders from the very remote possibility of a radical change in the value of United States currency, such as, for example, the changes in the values of German and other European currencies as a result of the war. While such a thing is unlikely to occur in this country, financiers always try to guard against every possible trouble. Although a bond may be payable in gold it is unnecessary to demand payment in actual gold coin since our American money is on a gold basis anyhow and our good old paper dollars have exactly the same value as golden dollars.

"But you want to bear in mind one thing. Because you buy a so-called 'gold bond,' that does not mean that the bond is secured by gold in any way, or that it is stronger than any other bond. The strength of a bond lies simply and only in the ability of the company that issues it to pay its debts. And of course you should consider the value of the property pledged or mortgaged to secure the bond, if any property is given as security."

"Dear me, Aunt Emmy," exclaimed Helen, "I never realized how much one needs to know before investing one's money. In my case it's awfully important not to have a loss, because although I have only a tiny amount of money it is all I have in the world. How can I ever learn to tell what is good from what is bad?"

"I am not sure you ever can rely on your own judgment, my dear," smiled Aunt Emmy, "but if you will be guided by your bank, you needn't worry."—A. B. Aymes.

ON GUARD AGAINST FARM CROOKS

With every constructive movement for the improvement of agriculture, one is likely to find men who will attempt to capitalize it for their own personal benefit. This may take the form of shipping in poor and unprofitable livestock to palm off on unsuspecting farmers, or it may sometimes be selling fair to good livestock at exorbitant prices under promise of taking back some of the offspring at high figures.

There are several instances where the college of agriculture through its county agent system has co-operated in heading off the introduction of undesirable or extravagantly priced livestock. In other instances the state bankers association, through its agricultural committee or the secretary's office, has sent warnings to its member banks relative to individuals or firms operating on an unsound basis. It is as important to head off undesirable and unprofitable investments as it is to encourage constructive and profitable ones.—Banker-Farmer.

BANKERS HELP

The banks of Bedford county, Tennessee, are furnishing pure bred eggs to all who will agree to return one pullet for each fifteen eggs in the fall.

The Missouri Bankers Association issued the first number of the "Agricultural Information Service Quarterly" in April. This publication deals with timely agricultural subjects of interest to bankers. A discussion of the various projects proposed as a basis for the program of banker-farmer co-operation in Missouri appears in the first issue.

Clearing houses in Georgia have approved a proposal for the expenditure of $30,000 annually for the next three years for the purpose of carrying out a program of farm development and crop diversification in Georgia. The proposal was initiated by the Georgia Bankers Association. The plan calls for the creation of a state-wide development committee of thirty members which will function under the direction of the Agricultural Committee of the Georgia Bankers Association.

Nebraska bankers are going to school. The College of Agriculture is having a short course in agriculture for bankers. Registration is in charge of the Nebraska Bankers Association. The predominant thought is, "Every bank in Nebraska should be represented." Nine out of ten banks in one county have signed attendance cards. Scores of the cards have been received by Dan V. Stephens, chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Bankers Association, and he has received over a hundred letters on the short course.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

REDUCE WIND RESISTANCE OF AUTOMOBILE

EYES NEED CARE AFTER CAR TRIP

Of Great Concern to Every Member of Family if Trip is Long One.

There is no reason why the eyes will have too much vacation if they are given a little attention this summer.

Motoring in the warm mid-day breezes or cool morning air is of great concern to the eyes of every member of the family, especially if the ride lasts several days and is taken in an open car. According to the Wisconsin department of home economics, a knowledge of how to care for the eyes on such occasions and in emergencies is invaluable to the older members of the group.

Weak Eyes Need Care.

Weak eyes may be soothed by the use of boric acid solution which may be purchased already prepared or may be made at home before the trip and bottled. The home-made solution may be made by adding one tablespoonful of boric acid to one pint of boiling water. Allow to cool and bottle. Apply to the eyes by means of an eye cup which may be purchased for a small sum. If the eyes are red and inflamed from the wind, they may be washed at morning and at night with the solution. Care should be taken to see that the boric acid crystals are thoroughly dissolved in order that they may not irritate the eyes. Solutions other than boric acid should not be used for the eyes unless a doctor has been consulted.

When that occasional cinder falls in the eye, there is every reason why it should be removed as quickly as possible. One of the easiest ways to remove it is to bring the top lid down over the bottom lid. This may remove the cinder if it has adhered to the inside of the upper lid, as is often the case. Never rub the eyes, as this is very irritating.

Tears Remove Cinders.

Another method to use is to hold the lids open so that the tears will have a chance to wash the cinder out. Closing the eyelids and rubbing them force the cinder against the eye ball and make it pain more than ever. If it cannot be washed out with tears, it is well to seek the help of a physician.

Most people prefer to wear goggles or glasses when taking a long motor trip. Smoked or amber glass is a protection against the strong light.

Avoid Excess Amount of Cement in Fixing Hole

The other day we undertook to patch a small hole in one of our inner tubes, using the small gasoline vulcanizer that has been in the garage for a long time. There is nothing whatever the matter with the device, but after following the directions carefully we found, on removing the vulcanizer and examining our handiwork, that the tube was stuck together. In trying to separate the two sides, we tore the rubber, doing a great deal more damage to the tube than we did good. After considering the matter for some time, we discovered that, in applying the preliminary cement to the hole, before putting on the rubber patch which we later vulcanized to the tube, we had carelessly used an excess of cement, which found its way inside the tube. Consequently, when clamping the tube in the vulcanizer and applying the heat, we not only vulcanized the new rubber patch to the outside of the tube, but also vulcanized the two inner walls of the tube together. It is important to remember this in doing any tube vulcanizing, for care must be taken to use just the right amount of cement to care for the patch, being sure that none works its way inside the tube itself.

Storage Battery Cannot Corrode if Kept Clean

The corrosion of metal parts on or about a storage battery is often attributed to a leaky or defective battery. This is usually due to the spilling or overflowing of battery solution and the neglect of the motorist to keep the exterior of the battery well cleaned.

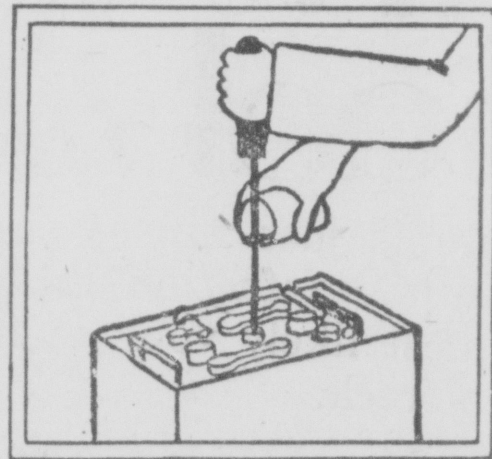

The corrosion of metal parts about a battery, indicated by a white lead sulphate coating, is caused by the action of escaped battery solution which eats into the metal.

Under ordinary driving conditions the charging of the battery by the generator causes more or less battery solution to vaporize through the vent holes in the filler caps of the battery cells. This vapor condenses on the battery and to prevent corrosion of the handles, hold-downs and other metal parts, and damage of the battery box, it is essential that the exterior of the battery be cleaned off regularly so that the acid cannot get in its work. This should be done with a clean, moist sponge whenever the battery is inspected or distilled water is added, and if the motorist will take a few moments occasionally to do this there should be little trouble with corrosion.

At the same time it is well to see that the hold-downs are tight to prevent unnecessary vibration. A thin coating of vaseline on all metal parts not lead coated will also help, acting with vaseline.

Screw Driver as Funnel

When a funnel is not available an easy way to fill the storage battery is by placing the screw driver over the hole and pouring the water slowly along the shank. The tool will direct the water into the battery without spilling.

"Traction Wave" Causes Tires to Roll Up Hill

A curious thing about tires is that they continually roll up hill. This is due to what is scientifically termed "traction wave," but what is popularly called "buge." Both terms mean the expansion of that portion of the elastic carcass of the tire which by weight and forward pull is forced just ahead of road contact.

In motion the tire is continually attempting to run over this traction wave, which, always just ahead, eludes it. Incidentally under-inflation increases the wave.

On a plain tread the wave runs round and round the tire, but a tread design with a backbone ribbed or cogged has been found effective in dividing and throwing off each side. Some treads are corrugated, some are smooth, some indented; but a purpose of all of them is to provide maximum traction to overcome this wave.

The tread must provide also for minimum road resistance, for minimum injury to the carcass underneath and for maximum road wear. Like the soles of shoes, a tread must absorb direct wear. Different kinds of service have their individual effects. Scuffing, skidding, spinning, tearing effects of rough roads—all these have a tendency to promote rapid wear.

When a tread is torn or badly worn it should be taken to a competent tire surgeon.

WHAT MAKES FOR SUCCESS IN LIFEE. W. Howe Comments on Burroughs' Philosophy.

John Burroughs, in summing up his life, said that he did what he most wanted to do in the world, what he was probably best fitted to do, not as a result of deliberate planning or calculation, but by simply going with the current, that is, following his natural bent, and refusing to run after false gods.

"Riches and fame and power, when directly pursued, are false gods.

"If a man deliberately says to himself, 'I will win these things,' he has likely reckoned without his host. His host is the nature within and without him, and that may have something to say on the subject.

"But if he says, 'I will do the worthy work that comes to my hand, the work that my character and my talent may bring me, and I will do it the best I can,' he will not reap a barren harvest."

It must be true that the majority of persons are disappointed in life. They have wanted something for nothing. They have tried short cuts to fame and fortune and have not been willing to pay the price of success. False gods cost us the most unhappiness.

"Can there be any theory or doctrine not connected with our practical lives so absurd that it will not be accepted as true by many people?" Burroughs muses in an essay. "How firmly was a belief in witchcraft held by whole populations for a generation! My grandfather believed in it, and in spooks and hobgoblins."

"If anyone were seriously to urge that we really walk on our heads instead of our heels, and cite our baldness as proof, there are persons who would believe him."

Every man must build up a philosophy of tried principles he can rely upon. And, observes E. W. Howe, the strength and extent of his philosophy will be the measure of his success in life.

"His limitations make up the boundary beyond which he cannot go. When he reaches his limit, he cannot stop, and howl for assistance, because it will not come. All the help he receives must come from himself. "And the first principle of this philosophy is that you have no rights you do not enforce."

Repairing St. Paul's

Most of St. Paul's cathedral in London, England, the choir, transepts and dome, has been closed to the public. There are accommodations for some 1,800 worshippers in the space remaining open to the public. The temporary wooden screen which will cut off the nave from the rest of the building is being constructed as rapidly as possible. It will be placed at the western end of the main piers which support the dome, leaving the space occupied by three and a half bays available for public worship. A temporary altar and choir stalls will be fitted against this screen. No definite estimate of the time required for repairing the piers has yet been made by the experts. It is believed, however, that the cathedral will not be fully reopened for at least five years.

Can Eat Poisoned Locusts

In South Africa, where plagues of locusts are often fought with arsenic, it has been found that these insects, even though they have succumbed to deadly poison, can still be used safely for cattle food, according to Science. Experts of the department of agriculture of the Union of South Africa have determined that in order to obtain a fatal dose of the poison, cattle, sheep or horses would have to consume 200 to 700 pounds of the locusts, indicating that none of these animals are in danger from the poisoned insects. For poultry and pigs, however, there is not such a wide margin of safety.

Airplane Building Time

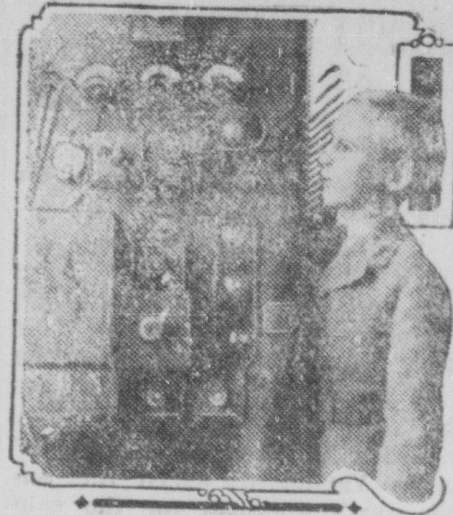

How long does it take to build an airplane? In automobile construction production men know the time it takes to turn out every little detail. Aircraft construction is still largely experimental and records of labor and cost are scarce. Therefore, it is very interesting to read in Aviation the record of time spent in building a small three-place, metal-hull flying boat with a 70-horse-power Anzani engine by the Aeromarine company. It took 2,375 hours to design it and 6,300 hours to build it, the hull being responsible for more than a third of the entire effort.

Candle Light Obsolete

In the days of lamp and candle light a city ordinance was passed in Joplin, Mo., prohibiting the holding of auction sales at night. This was intended to prevent buyers from being taken advantage of by reason of the darkness of the auction room. This ordinance, however, has now been repealed by the city commission because auction rooms are all well illuminated by electricity and the purchasers can see what they are buying.

12 Year Old Boy Soprano Is Popular WLW Artist

The WLW control panel interests young Warren Foster.

Warren Foster is only 12 years old and yet he has gained a reputation that many singers much older would envy. This boy has a natural high soprano voice and has been heard through the Crosley WLW super-power station. His concerts have brought him telegrams and letters of praise from teachers of voice throughout the country.

This juvenile prodigy is heard on the Tuesday evening concerts but he says his greatest pleasure is singing for the shut-ins on the Wednesday afternoon recitals.

Practice for forty minutes a day has been prescribed for him but, like a lot of other real lads, he does not always follow instructions and prefers to play. His teacher predicts he will either keep his present soprano voice or have a high baritone when his voice is ready to "change."

He is a pupil in the seventh grade public school and his parents will insist that he continue with his studies despite offers he has had to sing for various organizations.

VANDERBILT CHATEAU IN GOTHAM TO BE SOLD

Palatial Home in New York to Be Disposed of to Make Room For Business Block.

New York.—Another of the residential show places of society's "four hundred" on Fifth avenue is to be sold to make room for a business block.

Mrs. Alice G. Vanderbilt, widow of Cornelius Vanderbilt, asked the Supreme court's approval for the sale of the Vanderbilt chateau at Fifty-seventh street for $7,100,000. Since she came into possession of the property in 1890 the valuation has increased from $1,550,000 to $4,800,000, the petition states.

Taxes, which have risen from $38,446 to $120,120, she said, have become too burdensome.

The chateau itself is assessed at only $100,000, though it cost $3,000,000 when it was built and contains some of the most valuable art objects, French wood carvings and tapestries in the country. It was built in the style of the Chateau de Blois on the River Loire in France. There is a great central ballroom in the style of Louis XVI, surrounded by a series of private suites.

The buyer is reported to be G. Maurice Heckscher, son of August Heckscher, philanthropist. The approval of the court for the sale is necessary because Mrs. Vanderbilt merely has life use of the property. All the Vanderbilt heirs have approved the sale, the petition says. The court's order directing the heirs to show cause August 26 why the sale should not be permitted is regarded as a formality.

Mrs. Vanderbilt will move ten blocks up the avenue to the former home of George J. Gould.

MISSING NAVAL SEAPLANE P.N. 19 FOUND

COMMANDER JOHN RODGERS CREW OF FOUR FOUND ALIVE

Navy Aviators Rescued Near Idhue, Island of Kauai, 64 Miles From Their Goal, Floated In Pacific Ocean For Nine Days--Started From San Francisco On August 31st.

Commander John Rodgers, captain of the missing naval seaplane PN19, No. 1, and his crew of four men were found alive Thursday evening 15 miles east of Kauai by the submarine R54.

Rodgers and his crew left San Francisco in an attempted nonstop flight to Honolulu on August 31.

The following afternoon, 24 hours after his seaplane, the PN-9 No. 1, hopped off the plane and crew disappeared about 300 miles from its destination.

Last message from the PN-9 No. 1, stated that its gasoline supply was about exhausted and a forced landing was expected.

The naval vessels stationed along course of the flight immediately took up the search for the plane, but nothing of the missing men was seen until Thursday night.

The island of Kauai is 64 miles west by northwest of the island of Oahu, Oahu, of which Honolulu is the principal city, was the destination of the big seaplane in its flight across the waters of the Pacific.

The plane was sighted floating shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon when the submarine R-4 started to meet the destroyers coming in from the fleet.

The submarine was commanded by Lieutenant Osborne, who, upon taking off Rodgers and his crew, immediately notified naval authorities saying the plane was in tow and would arrive in Pearl Harbor Thursday night.

Lieutenant Osborne's message other than saying the men were safe and well did not give their condition, simply saying he had taken the plane in tow.

It was off the coast of Kauai that the minesweeper Whippoorwill reported seeking flares a day or two after the search for the missing plane had started. A white flare and two red flares, or rockets were believed to have been seen immediately after a check of calculations the searching operations were transferred to this region, which was considerably outside of the zone previously searched.

When the news of the finding of Rodgers and his crew was confirmed by the navy, Honolulu papers issued extras and the people of the city went wild with joy, enacting scenes reminiscent of the armistice. White-clad sailors from the fleet, some of whom had been shipmates of the men of the PN-9 No. 1, mingled with civilians in an eager rush to obtain papers conveying the news.

Rodgers and his crew were in good health. This was indicated in a message intercepted by an amateur radio operator from Nawiliwili, which said, "Request tug be sent to Nawiliwili for Rodgers and crew who are in good health."

MILK INDUSTRY JOINS STATE IN CAMPAIGN

Question of Waste on Stream Pollution is Considered in Joint Session.

Milk industries of Ohio were well represented in the conference held Thursday in the senate chamber called by the state department of health to consider the milk plant waste problem in its effect on stream pollution.

After presentation of the problem in its general aspects by State Health Director John E. Monger and more especially by W. H. Dittoe, departmental chief engineer, and a discussion of the relative values of co-operative and individual efforts at solution by those present. John Schuchbach of Canton, representing the Ohio Milk Distributors' association, was elected temporary chairman and organization methods were considered.

Necessity for a friendly public opinion toward the milk industry was emphasized during the conference; stress was laid on the influence of the present dry season with its attendant low water supplies in creating difficulties for the industry, and it was pointed out that more complaints, proceeding often to the point of suits for damages or actions for injunction, are registered against the milk industry than against any other. There was unanimous agreement that cooperative effort is the best way to solve the problem and to eliminate these difficulties.

APPLE VENDER CONTESTS HIS BROTHER'S WILL

Suit Filed in Cincinnati Court to Control Estate of Morris S. Stone.

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 11 (UP).—Samuel Stone continued to burnish his apples here today and to hope that a Cincinnati court will break the will of his late brother, Morris Stone, formerly a wealthy Jewish leader of Cincinnati.

Under the terms of the disputed will Samuel was left only $60. So he employed Froome Morris, attorney, to handle the case. It so happens that Mrs. Adelaide, of London, England, had entered the battle. Samuel says that he never knew his brother had a wife and inclined to the belief that there is a dark gentleman in the woodpile somewhere.

The brothers are natives of Poland where their mother and other relatives reside. The will is said to have consisted chiefly of brief notations on irregularly torn pieces of wrapping paper in the dead man's safety deposit.

Sam said his brother was always referred to as the "bachelor." The Dayton man said the original family name was Bernstein, but that on coming to America the name Stone, was taken by them.

According to Sam if Morris had a wife he would have lived with her and provided for her, because he says he was a good man.

Only trouble is, before marriage love is all. And after marriage so many other things crowd into the picture.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Crosley Radio News Service, Cincinnati, O.

RADIO CHATS WITH
Powel Crosley Jr.

SUPER-POWER broadcasting stations, that is, stations using 5,000 watts, should be remotely controlled. That is to say, they should be away from the centers of population.

The experience of Station WLW in Cincinnati is a case in point.

Permission was given to this station to use full strength following a number of successful experimental tests to ascertain if it would cause interference to radio fans in greater Cincinnati. No difficulty in "tuning out" the station was reported, due to the fact that the station is located 25 miles from Cincinnati.

SUPER-POWER will greatly overcome static interference, especially during the summer months. With super-power real distance will be possible and day-light reception will be good throughout the year.

Radio fans should experience no difficulty in radio reception from now on. Super-power will make the receivers with one, two or three tubes more valuable than ever before.

This use of super-power is a distinct step forward. The next step is to see that the super-power station is away from the congested centers.

Another advantage of super-power is that it will encourage the use of portable radio sets which will take entertainment to the ocean beach, to mountain camp, river and lake camp—the whole out-of-doors.

ONE of the important factors responsible for the increased use of radio receivers in the summer time is the policy of broadcasting stations to maintain a schedule of programs throughout the summer.

Radio is becoming less and less seasonal and the time is rapidly coming when radio reception will be just as good during the summer as it is during the winter; just as good during the day as it is during the night.

MARRIAGE
ORR-YAPLE.

Pencil blue satin made with a cape effect of white and gold applique, formed the bridal gown of Miss Clione Yaple, Saturday, when she became the bride of Mr. Fred Orr, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Orr, Columbus pike. The bride wore a beautiful corsage of pink rosebuds and delphinium.

A large company of guests was gathered at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Yaple, Kingston, to witness the ceremony. The service was read at 12 o'clock, the bride and groom standing before a background of garden flowers, which formed a temporary altar. Rev. T. C. Kerr, pastor of the Kingston Presbyterian church, officiated, using the Presbyterian ring ceremony.

After the ceremony the bride and groom led the way to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated in pink and white asters and pink rosebuds, where a sumptuous four-course dinner was served by Emma Harris, cateress, and three assistants.

The bridal couple left immediately for a week's trip via auto to Cleveland, Sandusky and other northern points. The bride's traveling dress was a combination of black and blue flat crepe. She wore a hat to match.

Both bride and groom are graduates of the Kingston high school. The bride has taught in the Kingston grade schools for the past three years. The groom is a prosperous young farmer. Upon their return they will make their home on his father's farm on the Columbus pike.

Those present at the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Orr, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Orr, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Maxwell, Helen Orr and Elizabeth Orr, Columbus; Irene Orr, Virginia Lee Orr, Mrs. Mandane Lutz, Mrs. Hattie Ellis, Mrs. Adella Ashworth, Mrs. Effie Strait, Mrs. Ella Thomas, Bainbridge; Mrs. Elizabeth Hassensplu, Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. H. Maine Buys Historic Forts for Public Parks

Portland, Maine.—Eight old forts on the coast of Maine, with ruined block-houses and grass-grown ramparts, have been bought by the state from the federal government in the last two years to be converted into parks of historic interest.

A bill proposing that the forts be sold to private persons was introduced in the senate in December, 1922. On hearing of it, Gov. Percival R. Baxter took immediate action. The cost of the forts and equipment and sites amounted to only $19,479.50. More, of course, will be needed for repairing the ruins and putting the reservations into good order, which means improving and strengthening sea walls. Proper signs will be placed for the guidance of visitors.

Other states are following the lead of Maine and are preparing to restore their old forts. These include Fort Vancouver in Washington, Harrod's fort in Kentucky and Fort Pike in Colorado.

Her Last Employment
"Where were you employed last?" asked the manager of the fair applicant.
"In a doll factory, sir."
"And what were your duties there?"
"Making eyes."
"Very well. You are engaged; but please don't demonstrate your capabilities when my wife is around."

"Dad," said Clarence, "what's a three-letter word meaning trouble?"
"Yes," growled his father, who was wishing he had been struck dumb the day he proposed.

EASING THE BURDEN OF STATE TAXATION

Banker Points Out Benefits of Community Property System in Some States.

Favorable aspects of tax systems are now among the most highly prized assets of our states. It is pointed out in the American Bankers Association Journal in connection with an article on how California, which has never had a state income tax, cuts state and Federal death taxes nearly in half by the "community property" system. L. H. Roseberry, Vice President Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, author of the article, says that a recent amendment to the tax law enables future residents of the state to take advantage of it. Reference is made to a former article by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey, voicing the need for death tax reform and citing a hypothetical case involving California inheritance taxes which might have been levied in 1920. Since that time the laws have been changed, Mr. Roseberry declares, so that the figures then given do not correctly represent the present situation. He says:

"Ever since its admission California has had the 'community property' system. Eight other states have a similar system. 'Community property' is property accumulated by married persons during their marriage, except that which is acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance. Approximately 65 per cent of all property in the state is 'community property.' Such property in California enjoys the most favorable position in regard to death taxes, both state and Federal, of any state in the Union (excepting possibly the eight other states having a similar property system) including states boasting of no inheritance tax whatever. The California 'community property' system is recognized for the purpose of levying Federal estate taxes, and only one-half of it is now so taxed, while in Florida the whole estate of a decedent is subject to the Federal levy.

How the Law Works
"California's law expressly provides that upon the death of either husband or wife, testate, only one-half of their net 'community property' shall be subject to inheritance taxes. The same exemption applies upon the death of the husband, intestate, while the whole net 'community property' is totally exempt from all state inheritance taxation upon the death of the wife intestate. The Federal estate tax law now follows precisely the California law in this respect.

"As the result of an amendment made to the California inheritance tax law by the 1925 Legislature, this immunity from state inheritance taxes likewise now extends to 'community property' of non-resident married persons, who hereafter take up their legal residence in the state. This puts 'community property' in a more favorable position regarding death taxes than exists in any other state in the Union, with the possible exception of the other community property states. This extension of the exemption will add 15 per cent to property in the state coming under this definition, which means that approximately 80 per cent of all property probated in California will enjoy the lightest death taxes in America.

"To illustrate, the following example of a man survived by a wife and two minor children is computed, the estate consisting of 'community property' all left by will to the wife and children. One-half of such property would go under the law to the wife without any death taxes, and the other half only would be subject to both state inheritance and Federal estate taxes.

"As a subject of comparison, take a state which has no inheritance tax, such as Florida. If the comparison were made with the states which impose inheritance taxes but do not have the 'community property' system, the advantage in favor of California would even be more striking.

Estate of $100,000	Total Tax
California	None
Non-inheritance-tax state	$500
Advantage in favor of California	500
Estate of $200,000
California	900
Non-inheritance-tax state	3,000
Advantage in favor of California	2,095
Estate of $400,000
California	5,775
Non-inheritance-tax state	13,000
Advantage in favor of California	7,225
Estate of $1,000,000
California	12,215
Non-inheritance-tax state	25,425
Advantage in favor of California	13,210

"If the two children were adults the California tax would be increased only $280 in each case.

Another New Amendment
"Another feature of the recent amendment to the California inheritance tax law is a section fixing the inheritance taxes on stock in California corporations owned by non-residents at a flat sum of 2 per cent on their actual value. When considered in conjunction with the ruling that no inheritance taxes can be levied upon any stock in foreign corporations, or upon bank accounts, bonds, notes, debentures, or similar securities belonging to a non-resident but located in the state at the time of such non-resident's death, it will be observed that at present the inheritance tax situation in California is most favorable both to non-residents who have property in this state and to married people who live here or who may subsequently move here from elsewhere."

REPLACING CAKES AND CANDIES WITH JEWELS, LACES AND BOUTONNIERES

Tin Boxes on Which Charming Designs Have Been Lithographed.

THE ornamental tin boxes in which one may now buy candies, dainty cakes, candied fruits, and the like, are a far cry from the days when such confections used to be carried home in paper bags. The attractive tin receptacles of today have value not only in the fact that they keep their contents fresh, but that they are real ornaments which will grace any library-table or buffet.

Nor does their value end there. Emptied of their edible contents, they may be put to numerous uses. Charming jewel boxes may be made of them; also boxes to hold handkerchiefs, gloves, ribbons, laces, or cigarettes.

Their lacquered decorations are so colorful and artistic that they will fit into almost any color-scheme. To make one of these pretty tin boxes over into a jewel-case, a pad of cotton wadding should be cut to fit the bottom of the box. Over this and around the sides should be carefully glued a velvet lining, in one of the colors used on the exterior decoration of the box. Thus padded and lined it appears to have been destined from the first to serve as a casket for beautiful jewels.

Satin linings are perhaps more suitable for the boxes that are to hold handkerchiefs, gloves, ribbons, etcetera. In these no wadding will be necessary. The satin lining should be cut to fit exactly the sides and bottom of the box, stretched smoothly over these surfaces and glued with care. In working with fine fabric use the best quality glue so there will be no discoloring and the surfaces will adhere smoothly and permanently.

If a cigarette box is desired, it is better to use a square or oblong tin box. As a cigarette container it need not be lined, although it would not be inappropriate to do so. Perhaps a lining of taffeta silk would be best, because fragments of tobacco would not cling to it as they might to a satin surface. The box, with its prettily decorated cover, would be a pleasing addition either to the library table or to the dressing-table in milady's boudoir. For the latter, one should be selected that is done in light, dainty colorings; while a box of Oriental colors and design would be best suited to the library or a man's den.

In selecting a lining for any of these boxes, it would be well to choose from the less dominant colors on the cover. For instance, where there is an Oriental design in rich red, blue and yellow, with the red predominating, the blue note had best be repeated in the lining. Or perhaps a box of Japanese design will be done in black and silver. Here a contrasting lining would be artistic, such as a pale green, or a bright Chinese red.

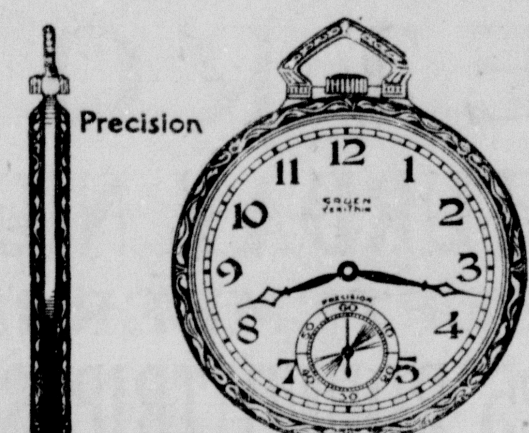

The work of adapting these lovely boxes to new uses is a fascinating one. They would make delightful Christmas gifts, with perhaps a sample enclosed of the article they are designed to hold—in the handkerchief-box, a dainty kerchief of fine linen; a pair of gloves in the glove-box; cigarettes neatly placed in the box intended for that use; in the jewel-box, one of the dainty, pastel-colored pearl necklaces now so inexpensive but popular. Not, however, that any enclosure would be expected. For any one of these pretty boxes, neatly and artistically lined, would be a charming gift in itself.

These ornamental tin boxes may be procured in almost any candy-store or bakery. In tin boxes hard candy will keep fresh and dry and may be preserved for a long time. The tin cake-boxes usually hold fruit cakes, since it is desirable to keep them for an indefinite time. In this type of container the cakes will remain fresh and delicious. Such boxes of cakes or candies may be kept on the table in the boudoir, or on the dining-room buffet. They will be found extremely handy, and as attractive as they are useful. They are a good investment.

A most attractive gift to a movie fan would consist of a group of boxes, each decorated with the face of a popular and celebrated screen actress, each lined to match some color note of the boudoir and each labeled on the outside of the box below the lid with the name of the article for which intended, such as gloves or jewels.

FISH WALKS ON 8 HANDS; FOUND IN SARGASSO SEA

Specimen Brought Back by Beebe, Leader of Arcturus Expedition—Romantic Yarns Punctured.

New York.—A fish with a transparent pane over its stomach through which its whole internal mechanism can be seen, a fish that walks with eight hands, a fish illuminated with thousands of pinpoints of light and a devilfish 18 feet across are among the specimens of marine life brought back on the ocean-going scientific laboratory Arcturus from its expedition to the Sargasso sea and the Pacific.

Dr. William Beebe, leader of the party of fourteen scientists who dredged, fished, preserved and painted thousands of specimens of oceanic life during the 12,000-mile journey, was enthusiastic over the results achieved.

Except for storms which cleared the Sargasso sea and prevented finding certain varieties of seaweed which were sought, the expedition obtained good results.

The party ended its fishing activities about 100 miles from New York, at the foot of an undersea cliff 930 feet high over which the Hudson thundered 2,000,000 years ago in a greater waterfall than any now existing on earth, said Doctor Beebe. Some of the most remarkable species were found here.

The Sargasso sea, declared Doctor Beebe, has been greatly romanticized by writers. Stories of ships imprisoned in the floating weeds he called legends.

Instead of floating prairies, the expedition found only patches of floating seaweed.

Snake and Lizard Skin for Chapeau

Visored Hat Is Fashionable With Sports Dress; Many Colors in Leather.

It was while the artists who design sports clothes for the smart set were busy with outfits to be worn at the races that the visor hat was suggested, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times. There is no hint of the conventional in the genuine visored cap, the jockey's proper headpiece, though it has been adopted to many sorts of hats, made to protect the eyes, for both men and women. But now that the sports suit has a definite place in artistic dress, the visored hat represents the last word in style. It is modified, of course, and feminized, the visor being really just a suggestion of the original.

Models worn by the younger English women who go in for clothes of that type are snappy and extreme in their prettiness, and are made of leather, cloth, suede or felt, or a cloth to match the suit. Very swagger little affairs are of snake skin and of lizard skin. It would require a naturalist's knowledge to tell just what species of reptile supplied the skin, but they are of different kinds, markings and shades, fine and delicate and lovely. Gray and olive tinted skins are stylish.

Once you go into the leathers for sports hats selection is large and varieties attractive. Browns, tans and yellows are popular, for the English sportswoman knows the value of rich browns and all of the shades to set off a fresh complexion. The little round shapes in brown kid are modish, and the "melon" shape is the most fashionable this season, precisely that we see in the best sports shops at home.

One much featured at a prominent London establishment is made of brown glove kid with tiny visored brim of bright yellow suede. Another of these is especially attractive, the crown being of finely marked gray snake skin, the narrow trim showing the smallest visor outline in front, of jade green cloth, bound with dark gray kid. A hat of the more flashy sort, yet very smart, has a crown of gilt kid and brim of brown suede bound with a line of scarlet kid. These hats are much worn for motoring. One sees many of them at athletic events about London to which women drive.

Many other styles in hats to be worn with sports dress are made of different materials. Those in rough fancy straws are particularly pretty and will be seen late in England where women do not mark the seasons as definitely in their dress as we do. Open weaves of straw dyed the most vivid colors are shown in close shapes having more brim than the regular cloche, just like the late summer hats in New York, but always with the down line. These are embroidered with crevices in gay flowers clustered in front and around the crown. They are quaint yet chic and have the advantage of going well with different sorts of dress, with the knitted jumper frocks, a tweed suit or a practical crepe or voile.

The material in these hats has an especial interest for Americans because it is that open, glossy sort of which we have heretofore made mats and baskets. It takes beautifully the most brilliant dye and is light as a feather. American visitors appear to be seizing upon these unusual, picturesque hats which will do charmingly for the southern winter resorts, and, no doubt, carry on for next early summer.

Plan to Mark Site of Historic Logan House

Altoona, Pa.—Efforts are being made by local and other historical societies to mark appropriately the spot of the historic old Logan house, which will be razed to make way for a new railroad station. It was in a room in the old house that the Union war governors, in September, 1862, met with President Lincoln and pledged him their faith and support.

The meeting was informal and private, no written record of any kind was kept and newspaper reporters were not present. It was called to take measures for more active support of the government and resulted in the pledge to Lincoln and the Union. The pledge was signed by 13 governors and endorsed by a number of others not at the conference.

Among the signers were A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania; John A. Andrew, Massachusetts; Richard Yates, Illinois; Israel Washburn, Jr., Maine; Samuel J. Kirkwood, Iowa; William Sprague, Rhode Island; F. H. Pierpont, Virginia; David Todd, Ohio; N. S. Berry, New Hampshire, and Austin Blair, Michigan.

Odd Names for Peaks, Canyons Upset Utah

Salt Lake City.—Utah residents are aroused over chance and possibly inappropriate names bestowed upon many of the peaks and canyons in the south Utah region which includes Zion National park, Cedar Breaks State park and Bryce canyon national monument.

Suggestion has been made that a commission be appointed to take up the matter with the national geographic board of the United States.

Report from Zion National park is that a woman tourist while riding through a rock crack recently remarked "this must be Purgatory pass"—and the name has stuck. Another instance which has created disapproval is the calling of the majestic triplet-peaks of the Three Patriarchs in Zion park by the name of a nationally known concern.

A majority of the peaks and canyons in south Utah region are unnamed—there are so many of them—and it is hoped that something will be done toward proper naming before too many nicknames are given.

Gas Masks for Ponies and Pigeons Tested by Army

New York.—Devices resembling feed bags, but which keep out gas rather than keep in grain, have been used on polo ponies in connection with the testing of new types of army gas masks at Governors Island.

A polo pony wearing a cloth bag that looked like a feed bag over its nostrils and upper jaw walked unharmed through clouds of mustard gas after a gas grenade had been discharged nearby.

Two carrier pigeons, not required to wear individual masks, but protected by a gas-proof cage, went through the tear gas ordeal perfectly. One of the birds was a cousin of the famous carrier pigeon President Wilson, which lost an eye and a leg, but carried a message to the lost battalion in the Argonne.

Nails 100 Years Old Found Near Site of Fort

Ridgefield, Wash.—Century-old nails, laboriously forged by hand, were found here recently, near the site of the old Hudson's Bay company block-house, erected in 1825 to care for the fur trade of the Columbia river and its tributaries. The nails were in a stout wooden box of material two inches thick. It is believed the nails were lost in transferring the material from boats to the fort. Some of the square, greenish iron spikes were used in an airplane hangar being erected here by the army.

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

Take me back to Peaceful Valley
To the good old "handset" day,
When we juggled with the galley
In the good old-fashioned way,
Where the editor and devil
Swapped tobacco to and fro
And they all were on a level,
And were comrades, don't you know.

All your high-falutin' presses
And your linotypes and such,
And your new attractive "dresses"
Don't amount to very much
To a feller educated
'Mid the romance of a day
When the paper was created
In the good old "handset" way.

When a fightin' man meandered
In to clean up on the shop,
Makin' claims that he'd been slandered
And we never called a cop;
When the boys would all unlimber
Mallet, wrench and shootin' stick
And would chase him to the timber
At a pace that made him sick.

When we always had a column
Of obituary stuff
That was full of rhyme so solemn
It was plenty good enough
For each old delinquent brother
As he saw fit for to die.
No use settin' up another,
So we used the old standby.

When the "extra quick edition"
Was a thing we never knew
Under any old condition,
'And the heads were mighty few.
With no hurry and no bustle,
Till it came to Friday night,
When we'd all turn in and hustle
Some to get the sheet out right.

What a wealth of young ambition,
When we got our first real place,
'A most glorified position—
That of workin' at the case.
There is where we got our knowledge
In the good old-fashioned way,
Didn't have to go to college
In the good old "handset" day.

—Roy K. Moulton.

FIRST WATER PEARLS FOUND ON SKELETONS

Helmets, Tortoise Shell Ornaments, Pottery and Beads Unearthed.

Chillicothe, O., Sept. 11 (UP).—Armed guards patrolled the Price mound in the ancient Seip group near Bainbridge, Ohio, today following discovery of additional valuable relics of mound builders during excavations under the direction of Curator Harry C. Shetrone of the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Museum, Columbus.

Thousands of pearls, many of them retaining their fine lustre; copper helmets, tortoise shell and silver ornaments, pottery, beads and other rare curiosities have been unearthed. Excavation was continued today with the expectation of finding other deposits.

Curator Shetrone has named the mound "The burial of Pearls." Shetrone said he believed the mounds were built by a tribe of Indians that inhabited this section several thousand years ago.

Four pearl bedecked skeletons, have been unearthed.

LAWYERS CAN DO IT.

Courts and lawyers can do more toward the elimination of crime than the combined influences of churches and ethical societies of whatsoever character, and this statement invites to no disparagement of these noble moral agencies.

Much has been said and written concerning crime suppression, multitudes of suggestions have been offered innumerable formulas proposed. Social activity practically has exhausted itself in efforts to meet this issue. It could be settled within 30 days!

The attorney general of the United States and former Secretary of State Hughes both referred to this matter in their speeches before the annual bar association. In simplest terms, their advice and admonition amounted to this: Elevate the standard of the bar; make lawyers evangelists of good citizenship; eliminate that sinister element among lawyers which lacks appreciation of and fidelity to the ethics of what, in theory at least, is recognized as earth's noblest profession—get rid of the publicity seeker, the shyster, the avid money-grubber, the vile legal spawn recognized by the underworld as "mouthpieces."

A regenerated bar and bench would inaugurate an era of exact justice; criminals would be defended in harmony with the spirit of the constitutional guarantee, but they would not be able to find legal assistance that would do more than to assure to them a fair trial. Under such an order the guilty would find no one for hire to compass his deliverance. Under such an order courts would function with such dispassionate rectitude as would appall the now insolent criminal hordes who rely upon legal delay, evasions, technicalities, political and other improper influence.

In a recent statement to the public Mark O. Prentice, of the National Crime commission, said that the legal profession was chiefly responsible for existing crime conditions, which show the "complete collapse" of the administration of criminal justice. Criminals go unpunished.

Mr. Prentice said: "The lawyers now have the chance to do something more than merely make a gesture. For a generation the bar association of cities, states and the nation have met periodically, passed resolutions deploring crime conditions—and have done nothing else. It is easy to pass the responsibility on to the legislatures, but the answer to that is that the legislature of practically every state is made up, very largely, of lawyers, generally from 65 to 90 per cent and any time they choose to discard the accepted alignments of party politics and create a new alignment of those who favor modern criminal codes to cope with modern criminality they can accomplish it."

Chief Justice Taft, on his return from a study of English criminal jurisprudence, indicated a similar view.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Use of Dependable Disinfectants UrgedProper Sanitation Essential With Farm Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the disinfection of premises and buildings and in preparing dips for live stock, products of known dependability are essential for satisfactory results. This timely counsel is issued by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in connection with a recent ruling which requires cattle owners to disinfect their premises before the government will pay indemnity for animals found to be tuberculous.

For many years the bureau has conducted extensive research and thousands of field tests with dips and disinfectants. Accordingly, it is prepared to give detailed information on the subject. Live stock owners may consult the bureau's veterinary inspectors or may obtain suitable bulletins dealing with disinfection and sanitation on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Disinfectants differ greatly in their effectiveness against various disease organisms and parasites. Hence it is essential, first, to select one known to be suitable for the particular purpose in view and, secondly, to use it in the proper strength. When commercial preparations are used, it is usually the part of economy to select a standard product. The cost of the materials is small in most cases compared with the item of labor in doing the work, and a few cents saving by purchasing an inferior product may reduce greatly the thoroughness of the disinfection.

Sanitation is an important principle in keeping live stock and poultry healthy, and a small quantity of disinfectant kept on hand will often prevent serious losses. Prompt disinfection of barbed wire scratches and cuts is one instance of such practical aid aside from the more extensive use in the disinfection of buildings and yards.

Some Advantages Given by Winter Cover Crops

Winter cover crops give returns five ways. They will preserve the existing fertility. There is always some plant food left from the fertilizer applied in the spring and much of this will leach away unless there is a crop growing to take it up. Second, the cover crop helps to prevent the loss of soil and plant food by erosion. Third, the cover crop when turned under will fill the soil with organic matter making it easier to till and increasing its water-holding capacity. Fourth, leguminous cover crops when turned under will add more nitrogen per acre than is ever likely to be applied at one time in commercial fertilizers. A good crop of vetch or crimson clover will furnish more nitrogen than 300 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda. Fifth, cover crops will furnish an abundant yield of high grade hay which may be cut at a time when the farm is apt to be getting short of feed.

Treatment Required for Blackcap Raspberries

Practically the only different treatment required for the blackcap raspberries is in the pruning. The black cap varieties form new plants where the tips of the canes touch the ground. These canes have to be cut back so they may be supported on wires or tied to stakes. The canes should be cut back to about 30 inches or so in the spring.

After the fruit is gathered, all fruiting canes should be cut out close to the ground and burned. This is to get rid of diseases or insects that may be on them. It is always better to cultivate a raspberry patch, but a mulch assists in keeping the fruit clean. Three to six canes are sufficient for a hill. Too many raspberry patches are ruined by allowing them to produce too many canes and plants.

Farm Hints

Will you have a green straw stack this fall?

Most farmers fail with alfalfa from too thick seeding.

Culling poultry is one of the best-paying jobs on the farm.

Rats can be largely eliminated by constantly making the farm a disagreeable place for them.

Keeping farm accounts is one of the most important activities on a successful farm. Don't neglect them during the busy season.

The corn harvester and the potato digger should come in for their share of attention long before it seems necessary. Then they'll be ready on time.

A short hay crop means less to handle and more dollars to the ton, which is all very well except for the farmer who planned on a large crop to feed his stock.

Studies made of all trees in a 40,000-acre German forest show that oak trees were most frequently struck by lightning. Beech, birch, and maple were almost never struck.

Mrs. George Targee In Critical Condition—Took Corrosive Sublimate.

Chillicothe, Sept. 9.—Mrs. George Targee of East Main street, is in a critical condition as the result of taking three or four bichloride of mercury tablets by mistake early Tuesday morning. This official statement discounts earlier reports that Mrs. Targee had attempted suicide.

According to reports, Mrs. Targee arose Tuesday morning about 1:30 o'clock to take some medicine, when she obtained the mercury tablets by mistake. She became very ill and Dr. John Franklin was called. He used the stomach pump and administered antidotes, working with the patient for several hours.

While her condition was improved Tuesday afternoon, it was still regarded as critical.

The husband of Mrs. Targee is a member of the Eagle ball team of this city.

INVESTIGATION

Of Shenandoah Catastrophe To Start Soon.

Washington, Sept. 10.—(UP.)—A court of inquiry to hear evidence on the Shenandoah disaster and to establish officially the cause of the catastrophe, will convene at Lakehurst as soon as possible, according to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

The court will be composed of naval officers appointed by Wilbur and will include one or more aeronautic experts. It will consist of a separate body of officers from those comprising the board of inquiry which met at Caldwell, Ohio, last week to determine the cause of the death of the 14 men who were killed.

All testimony of investigators at the wreck will be heard at the inquiry and parts of the wreckage shipped to Lakehurst from Caldwell will be examined.

Wilbur is seriously considering opening the entire procedure to newspaper representatives and possibly to the public.

Earth Fires Cause Alarm

Villagers are alarmed at Poremue, France, by a natural phenomenon occurring in a ravine close to the railroad of Beziers, where the ground has become so hot that it burns the feet of anybody trying to stand still. Clouds of heavy black smoke are rising from fissures in the rocks, while in some spots a thick, oily substance oozes from cracks in the ground and evaporates as soon as it gets in contact with the air, leaving everything covered with a shiny black, hard coating. The geological formation of the Aveyron district is volcanic in origin, but this appears to be the first sign of subterranean activity since prehistoric times. Scientists are proceeding to the spot to investigate. Pending a report, it is suggested that a stratum of lignite which exists in many parts of Aveyron may have become incandescent.—Family Herald.

Tahiti Talks of Dropping Use of the French Franc

Papeete, Tahiti.—The instability of the French franc has revived talk in Tahiti of establishing a local unit of value independent of the fluctuations of the franc. Opinion is expressed that as Tahiti is so remote from France, and is in the position of having a constant credit trade balance, the financial difficulties of the home country should not be allowed to unsettle values and disturb business in this colony.

As a matter of fact, the money used in the colony is a local paper currency issued by the Tahiti branch of the Banque d'Indo-Chine, but it fluctuates in sympathy with the franc.

A settled form of money is the only thing necessary to usher in a period of great prosperity to the island. Both the vanilla and copra yields are increasing and are commanding good prices.

FLAPPERS ARE OLD AS RACE'S HISTORY

Have Been Common in Every Race and Class.

There is nothing new under the moon. The flapper of today is one with Tyre and Nineveh. Away in the incredible years when the first foundation slab of the Sphinx was laid, the Egyptian flapper was interfering with the process of its future by furtive glances cast on impressionable members of the board of works of the pharaohs.

Cleopatra was a flapper. Shakespeare talks of her "hopping 40 paces down the public street." No one but a flapper could have adopted such a method of progression. Her freak of putting a valuable pearl in acid was sheer flapperishness.

Helen of Troy was a girl of many destructive impulses. She would have run at any cost. Hence the wooden horse and the fall of Troy.

At a little later period the skittish Venus was in the same capricious form when she prevailed upon the "Pious Aeneas" to break his journey with her.

Horace in his songs invokes the name of Lalage and other maidens. It is safe to assume that two-thirds of them were little canaries who coyly responded to the lyrical advances of the Latin nightingale.

In the heroic days the Grecian flappers took much more exercise than their Roman sisters. They were the forerunners of the modern sports girl.

Here it may be well to indicate that flappers are not confined to any one class of communities, ancient or modern. They are just as frequent among the plebs as among the patricians.

There is not the faintest doubt that ill-fated Marie Antoinette, in her early years at the French court, was an enchanting flapper.

Another most unhappy woman, Mary Queen of Scots, was so full of espielerie and fascination that John Knox, in Puritan Scotland, found her an easy victim to stern-browed persecution.

Louise de la Valliere was not the obvious type, but she was a type of flapper none the less. She was quite a little bird who attracted the long devotion of a fastidious king in a few flights. Her friend, Mlle. de Tonnay-Charente, afterwards Mme. de Montespon, was a bird of brighter methods, but both were of the order seduisante that captures kings and clerks alike.

More hoydenish and daring than either of them was the gallant sister of Charles II, later, Duchess d'Orleans. Charles' sister was as gay and larkly as the most up-to-date New York fun seeker. She loved to dress in the apparel of men, as girls of today adore appearing in mock-masculine garb at fancy dress dances.

Nell Gwyn was the very pink of flappers. Her smiles were as restorative as her oranges; and her kisses would have bucked up a regiment. Nell remained a flapper until the end. She never lost the arts of her grinning, impudent girlhood. Charles was a mighty good judge of the fair sex; and it is significant that he gave his best devotion to the queen and pride of flappers.—Book Notes.

Early Protestants

The name "Huguenots" was given to French followers of Calvin, Protestant leader of the Reformation. They suffered massacre at Vassy by the party of Guise in 1562. This act led to the civil wars, which continued until the Edict of Nantes in 1598, when civil and religious liberty was confirmed to them. The massacre of St. Bartholomew occurred August 24, 1572, during a truce in the wars. The power the Huguenots gained as a political party following the edict was of short duration, being destroyed in a few years by Louis XIII and his minister, Richelieu. Louis XIV, in 1685, revoked the Edict of Nantes, and as a result half a million Huguenots fled to England, Germany, the Netherlands, Switzerland and America.—Kansas City Star.

Found It Easy to Forgive

"You know the feeling, that flush of anger that comes over you when you're driving peacefully along a country road and suddenly hear a familiar sharp report," said the motorist. "You begin to curse and ask yourself why you didn't change that tire. Well, I was driving near the Oakland Hills Country and Golf club recently and all of a sudden 'Bang!' I got out to see which tire it was. They were all O. K. Then up comes a beknickered chap and starts apologizing for something. 'Sorry,' says he, 'sort of missed my aim and drove my pill into your rear fender.' Sure enough there was a dent in the fender and the ball was a short distance away. I was only too glad to forgive him."—Detroit News.

To Aid Children

Knights of Youth, a new order whose purpose is the ethical training of school children, has been introduced in 12 public schools of New York city. Nearly 1,000 children are enlisted in the ranks of knighthood in one school. This order acclaims character as the knight's noblest quest, and it was formed to combat the increase in juvenile crime. It is sponsored by the National Child Welfare association.

STATE DRY AGENT ON TRIAL FOR PERJURY

Cleveland, Sept. 9.—(UP.)—State Dry Agent W. J. Patrick was placed on trial here today, charged with perjury in connection with a dry raid on the home of State Senator George H. Bender, at Cleveland Heights.

First steps looking to a grand jury investigation of the raid, demanded by Senator Bender, was seen in the presence of attaches of the county prosecutor's office.

Patrick was arraigned in Justice of the Peace Chizek's court. He is accused of swearing to a false affidavit upon which Justice of the Peace Stanton Addams of East Cleveland, issued a warrant to search Bender's home.

Guy O. Farquharson, Bender's attorney, contends the law expressly forbids magistrates to issue search warrants for bona fide dwellings unless knowledge of sale of liquor is sworn to by the applicant for the warrant.

The Bender raid was made on the basis of an anonymous "tip," later found to have been given to Patrick by a patrolman.

FORMER JUDGE GRAHAM DEAD

Denver, Colo., Sept. 9.—(UP.)—Royal R. Graham, former U. S. district judge and candidate for juvenile judge against Judge Ben B. Lindsey, last term, was found dead in his home shortly before noon today.

The former judge figured prominently in a recent recount of ballots for the juvenile judgeship here several months ago. Judge Lindsey finally winning the office. He was the alleged klan candidate for the office and the subject of many charges concerning the election.

Six gas jets were turned on in the room in which Graham was found by Roy C. Wilson, deputy city attorney, who went to the Graham home when he failed to appear at police court this morning where he had a case pending. All the windows were closed and the telephone had been disconnected.

College and Cathedral

Christ church, the largest and most notable of Oxford (Eng.) colleges, is in the fifth century of its existence. For reasons of convenience the celebration already had been held, so the true birthday anniversary of this curious institution, which is both a college and a cathedral and yet is called a church, passed quietly during the long vacation.

Modern investigation has revealed a remarkable continuity in the history of English ecclesiastical foundations. The Saxons built their churches on the ruins of the great Roman temples, and the Normans in their turn rebuilt the Saxon churches.

This continuity is most remarkable in Oxford, where nearly every college has grown out of a medieval monastery.

Christ church stands on the site of a priory, a parish church and at least two older monastic colleges. Its bells were removed from a neighboring abbey, and both the stones and the funds used in its construction were obtained from the dissolution of more than forty monastic foundations.

Long-Buried Tree

Rolla Fallon, employed at the Glenn Ayr mine, near Terre Haute, Ind., was digging coal with a pick 200 feet below the surface and more than a quarter of a mile back in the mine, late in March, when he struck a substance that was firmly embedded in the coal. He picked at it until a piece, more than one foot long fell out, disclosing a well-developed tree trunk with limb formations still intact. The whole tree appears to be in the coal. He took the wood to Terre Haute and will send it to the state museum at Indianapolis for further scientific research. The wood oozes water and is spongy instead of petrified, as would be supposed. The find is attracting considerable attention from miners.

WHEN THE, ETC.
When the class goes for a picnic and they find a sylvan glade, And somebody tips the barrel that contains the lemonade, And some one falls from the hammock and the teacher wants to swear But must smile with saintly patience, when a twig pulls off her hair, O, it's then that hearts are joyous and it's then that life is gay When the class all gets sun-blistered on its happy picnic day, And you sit down to dinner but you rise to frown and sigh For the bugs are in the ice cream and the ants are in the pie.

AMUSEMENTS

The feature picture at the Metropolitan theater is one of the fastest moving comedy romances the screen has seen in many a long day.

Richard Dix in John Monk Saunders' Liberty Magazine serial, "The Shock Punch"—a real he-man star, directed by Paul Sloane, who made "Too Many Kisses."

"The Shock Punch," adapted for the screen by Luther Reed, centers around Dix, in the role of Randall Lee Savage. He is afraid that his life of ease and luxury will tend to make him "soft" and hires a couple of professional pugilists to keep his pep up and his waistline down.

During the course of training, Savage develops a terrific blow, a "shock punch." Just a taste of it means curtains for the receiver. Savage is called to bring the blow into play several times—once when his father gets his trainers to "fix" a fight for Dix at an ironworker's ball. The old gent doesn't believe his son has it in him and almost passes out when a bullying steel worker hits the floor with a thud before the youngster.

But there is one drawback. Dorothy, "the only girl in the world" for Savage, detests anything that has to do with prize fighting, and she makes Randall promise not to fight for her sake, and this sort of puts the boy in a funny position when he gets a job as riveter on a building Dorothy's father is constructing. The men take to playing jokes on him—"the dude," they call him, and he has to bring them around now and then with a gentle reminder in the form of the "shock punch," later apologizing to the girl.

While on the job, Savage learns that the foreman and the engineer are working against their boss. Dorothy's father, who must finish the steel work on the building by a given date. He overhears their plan to send the girder which is to complete the work, crashing thru from the topmost story. He rides up on the girder himself, which slips (all this had been arranged by the foreman) and almost falls, but Savage reaches the top and before the beam even lands, he is off and on top of the crooked foreman. The old "shock punch" goes over to the point of his chin, and it's all over but the shouting.

Frances Howard is featured at the head of the supporting cast. Walter Long is "Bull" Mularkey, the foreman, and Charles Beyer plays the construction engineer. Others in the cast are "Gunboat" Smith, Dix's trainer; Paul Panzer and Percy Moore. Here's a picture with the "punch" in every sense of the word.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON "GOLD BONDS"

"Before I go to the bank to ask advice about investing the money mother left me, I wish you would tell me something more about bonds," said Helen to Aunt Emmy. "Am I right in thinking that gold bonds are absolutely safe? Are gold bonds what people mean by gilt edge securities?"

"What a child it is!" laughed Aunt Emmy. "I can see that you do need to learn something about bonds. The term 'gold bond' does not have anything to do with the term 'gilt edged security.' The latter is nothing more than a commonly used phrase that means a safe security. Companies that issue gold bonds usually agree to redeem them in United States gold coin of the weight and fineness of the gold coin issued by the United States Treasury at the time the bonds are put on the market. This is done in order to protect the bondholders from the very remote possibility of a radical change in the value of United States currency, such as, for example, the changes in the values of German and other European currencies as a result of the war. While such a thing is unlikely to occur in this country, financiers always try to guard against every possible trouble. Although a bond may be payable in gold it is unnecessary to demand payment in actual gold coin since our American money is on a gold basis anyhow and our good old paper dollars have exactly the same value as golden dollars."

"But you want to bear in mind one thing. Because you buy a so-called 'gold bond,' that does not mean that the bond is secured by gold in any way, or that it is stronger than any other bond. The strength of a bond lies simply and only in the ability of the company that issues it to pay its debts. And of course you should consider the value of the property pledged or mortgaged to secure the bond. If any property is given as security."

"Dear me, Aunt Emmy," exclaimed Helen. "I never realized how much one needs to know before investing one's money. In my case it's awfully important not to have a loss, because although I have only a tiny amount of money it is all I have in the world. How can I ever learn to tell what is good from what is bad?"

"I am not sure you ever can rely on your own judgment, my dear," smiled Aunt Emmy. "but if you will be guided by your bank, you needn't worry."—A. B. Aymes.

ON GUARD AGAINST FARM CROOKS

With every constructive movement for the improvement of agriculture, one is likely to find men who will attempt to capitalize it for their own personal benefit. This may take the form of shipping in poor and unprofitable livestock to palm off on unsuspecting farmers, or it may sometimes be selling fair to good livestock at exorbitant prices under promise of taking back some of the offspring at high figures.

There are several instances where the college of agriculture through its county agent system has co-operated in heading off the introduction of undesirable or extravagantly priced livestock. In other instances the state bankers association, through its agricultural committee or the secretary's office, has sent warnings to its member banks relative to individuals or firms operating on an unsound basis. It is as important to head off undesirable and unprofitable investments as it is to encourage constructive and profitable ones.—Banker-Farmer.

BANKERS HELP

The banks of Bedford county, Tennessee, are furnishing pure bred eggs to all who will agree to return one pullet for each fifteen eggs in the fall.

The Missouri Bankers Association issued the first number of the "Agricultural Information Service Quarterly" in April. This publication deals with timely agricultural subjects of interest to bankers. A discussion of the various projects proposed as a basis for the program of banker-farmer co-operation in Missouri appears in the first issue.

Clearing houses in Georgia have approved a proposal for the expenditure of $30,000 annually for the next three years for the purpose of carrying out a program of farm development and crop diversification in Georgia. The proposal was initiated by the Georgia Bankers Association. The plan calls for the creation of a state-wide development committee of thirty members which will function under the direction of the Agricultural Committee of the Georgia Bankers Association.

Nebraska bankers are going to school. The College of Agriculture is having a short course in agriculture for bankers. Registration is in charge of the Nebraska Bankers Association. The predominant thought is, "Every bank in Nebraska should be represented." Nine out of ten banks in one county have signed attendance cards. Scores of the cards have been received by Dan V. Stephens, chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Bankers Association, and he has received over a hundred letters on the short course.

REDUCE WIND RESISTANCE OF AUTOMOBILE

A radical among cars; the rumpler "drop-auto," so called because of its alleged resemblance to a falling rain drop, seen from the front, showing the lines by which wind resistance is reduced.

EYES NEED CARE AFTER CAR TRIP

Of Great Concern to Every Member of Family if Trip is Long One.

There is no reason why the eyes will have too much vacation if they are given a little attention this summer.

Motoring in the warm mid-day breezes or cool morning air is of great concern to the eyes of every member of the family, especially if the ride lasts several days and is taken in an open car. According to the Wisconsin department of home economics, a knowledge of how to care for the eyes on such occasions and in emergencies is invaluable to the older members of the group.

Weak Eyes Need Care.

Weak eyes may be soothed by the use of boric acid solution which may be purchased already prepared or may be made at home before the trip and bottled. The home-made solution may be made by adding one tablespoonful of boric acid to one pint of boiling water. Allow to cool and bottle. Apply to the eyes by means of an eye cup which may be purchased for a small sum. If the eyes are red and inflamed from the wind, they may be washed at morning and at night with the solution. Care should be taken to see that the boric acid crystals are thoroughly dissolved in order that they may not irritate the eyes. Solutions other than boric acid should not be used for the eyes unless a doctor has been consulted.

When that occasional cinder falls in the eye, there is every reason why it should be removed as quickly as possible. One of the easiest ways to remove it is to bring the top lid down over the bottom lid. This may remove the cinder if it has adhered to the inside of the upper lid, as is often the case. Never rub the eyes, as this is very irritating.

Tears Remove Cinders.

Another method to use is to hold the lids open so that the tears will have a chance to wash the cinder out. Closing the eyelids and rubbing them force the cinder against the eye ball and make it pain more than ever. If it cannot be washed out with tears, it is well to seek the help of a physician.

Most people prefer to wear goggles or glasses when taking a long motor trip. Smoked or amber glass is a protection against the strong light.

Avoid Excess Amount of Cement in Fixing Hole

The other day we undertook to patch a small hole in one of our inner tubes, using the small gasoline vulcanizer that has been in the garage for a long time. There is nothing whatever the matter with the device, but after following the directions carefully we found, on removing the vulcanizer and examining our handiwork, that the tube was stuck together. In trying to separate the two sides, we tore the rubber, doing a great deal more damage to the tube than we did good. After considering the matter for some time, we discovered that, in applying the preliminary cement to the hole, before putting on the rubber patch which we later vulcanized to the tube, we had carelessly used an excess of cement, which found its way inside the tube. Consequently, when clamping the tube in the vulcanizer and applying the heat, we not only vulcanized the new rubber patch to the outside of the tube, but also vulcanized the two inner walls of the tube together. It is important to remember this in doing any tube vulcanizing, for care must be taken to use just the right amount of cement to care for the patch, being sure that none works its way inside the tube itself.

Storage Battery Cannot Corrode if Kept Clean

The corrosion of metal parts on or about a storage battery is often attributed to a leaky or defective battery. This is usually due to the spilling or overflowing of battery solution and the neglect of the motorist to keep the exterior of the battery well cleaned.

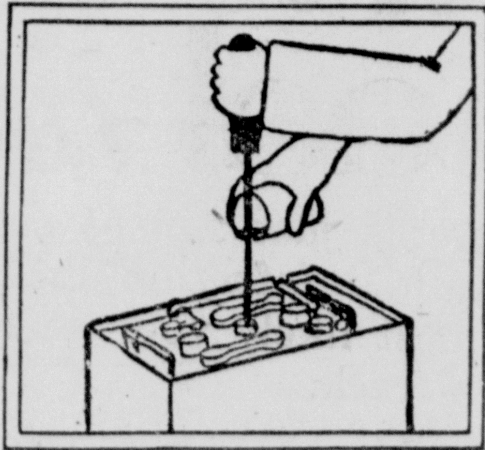

The corrosion of metal parts about a battery, indicated by a white lead sulphate coating, is caused by the action of escaped battery solution which eats into the metal.

Under ordinary driving conditions the charging of the battery by the generator causes more or less battery solution to vaporize through the vent holes in the filler caps of the battery cells. This vapor condenses on the battery and to prevent corrosion of the handles, hold-downs and other metal parts, and damage of the battery box, it is essential that the exterior of the battery be cleaned off regularly so that the acid cannot get in its work. This should be done with a clean, moist sponge whenever the battery is inspected or distilled water is added, and if the motorist will take a few moments occasionally to do this there should be little trouble with corrosion.

At the same time it is well to see that the hold-downs are tight to prevent unnecessary vibration. A thin coating of vaseline on all metal parts not lead coated will also help, acting with vaseline.

Screw Driver as Funnel

When a funnel is not available an easy way to fill the storage battery is by placing the screw driver over the hole and pouring the water slowly along the shank. The tool will direct the water into the battery without spilling.

Filling Battery.

"Traction Wave" Causes Tires to Roll Up Hill

A curious thing about tires is that they continually roll up hill. This is due to what is scientifically termed "traction wave," but what is popularly called "bulge." Both terms mean the expansion of that portion of the elastic carcass of the tire which by weight and forward pull is forced just ahead of road contact.

In motion the tire is continually attempting to run over this traction wave, which, always just ahead, eludes it. Incidentally under-inflation increases the wave.

On a plain tread the wave runs round and round the tire, but a tread design with a backbone ribbed or cogged has been found effective in dividing and in throwing off each side. Some treads are corrugated, some are smooth, some indented; but a purpose of all of them is to provide maximum traction to overcome this wave.

The tread must provide also for minimum road resistance, for minimum injury to the carcass underneath and for maximum road wear. Like the soles of shoes, a tread must absorb direct wear. Different kinds of service have their individual effects. Scuffing, skidding, spinning, tearing effects of rough roads—all these have a tendency to promote rapid wear.

When a tread is torn or badly worn it should be taken to a competent tire surgeon.

WHAT MAKES FOR SUCCESS IN LIFE

E. W. Howe Comments on Burroughs' Philosophy.

John Burroughs, in summing up his life, said that he did what he most wanted to do in the world, what he was probably best fitted to do, not as a result of deliberate planning or calculation, but by simply going with the current, that is, following his natural bent, and refusing to run after false gods.

"Riches and fame and power, when directly pursued, are false gods."

"If a man deliberately says to himself, 'I will win these things,' he has likely reckoned without his host. His host is the nature within and without him, and that may have something to say on the subject."

"But if he says, 'I will do the worthy work that comes to my hand, the work that my character and my talent may bring me, and I will do it the best I can,' he will not reap a barren harvest."

It must be true that the majority of persons are disappointed in life. They have wanted something for nothing. They have tried short cuts to fame and fortune and have not been willing to pay the price of success. False gods cost us the most unhappiness.

"Can there be any theory or doctrine not connected with our practical lives so absurd that it will not be accepted as true by many people?" Burroughs muses in an essay. "How firmly was a belief in witchcraft held by whole populations for a generation! My grandfather believed in it, and in spooks and hobgoblins."

"If anyone were seriously to urge that we really walk on our heads instead of our heels, and cite our baldness as proof, there are persons who would believe him."

Every man must build up a philosophy of tried principles he can rely upon. And, observes E. W. Howe, the strength and extent of his philosophy will be the measure of his success in life.

"His limitations make up the boundary beyond which he cannot go. When he reaches his limit, he cannot stop, and howl for assistance, because it will not come. All the help he receives must come from himself. "And the first principle of this philosophy is that you have no rights you do not enforce."

Repairing St. Paul's

Most of St. Paul's cathedral in London, England, the choir, transepts and dome, has been closed to the public. There are accommodations for some 1,800 worshippers in the space remaining open to the public. The temporary wooden screen which will cut off the nave from the rest of the building is being constructed as rapidly as possible. It will be placed at the western end of the main piers which support the dome, leaving the space occupied by three and a half bays available for public worship. A temporary altar and choir stalls will be fitted against this screen. No definite estimate of the time required for repairing the piers has yet been made by the experts. It is believed, however, that the cathedral will not be fully reopened for at least five years.

Can Eat Poisoned Locusts

In South Africa, where plagues of locusts are often fought with arsenic, it has been found that these insects, even though they have succumbed to deadly poison, can still be used safely for cattle food, according to Science. Experts of the department of agriculture of the Union of South Africa have determined that in order to obtain a fatal dose of the poison, cattle, sheep or horses would have to consume 200 to 700 pounds of the locusts, indicating that none of these animals are in danger from the poisoned insects. For poultry and pigs, however, there is not such a wide margin of safety.

Airplane Building Time

How long does it take to build an airplane? In automobile construction production men know the time it takes to turn out every little detail. Aircraft construction is still largely experimental and records of labor and cost are scarce. Therefore, it is very interesting to read in Aviation the record of time spent in building a small three-place, metal-hull flying boat with a 70-horse-power Anzani engine by the Aeromarine company. It took 2,375 hours to design it and 6,300 hours to build it, the hull being responsible for more than a third of the entire effort.

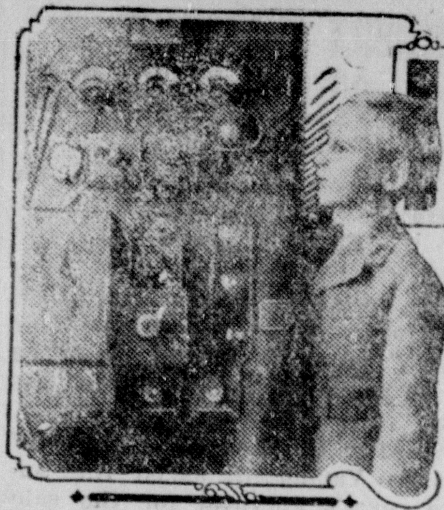

Candle Light Obsolete

In the days of lamp and candle light a city ordinance was passed in Joplin, Mo., prohibiting the holding of auction sales at night. This was intended to prevent buyers from being taken advantage of by reason of the darkness of the auction room. This ordinance, however, has now been repealed by the city commission because auction rooms are all well illuminated by electricity and the purchasers can see what they are buying.

12 Year Old Boy Soprano Is Popular W L W Artist

The WLW control panel interests young Warren Foster.

Warren Foster is only 12 years old and yet he has gained a reputation that many singers much older would envy. This boy has a natural high soprano voice and has been heard through the Crosley WLW super-power station. His concerts have brought him telegrams and letters of praise from teachers of voice throughout the country.

This juvenile prodigy is heard on the Tuesday evening concert but he says his greatest pleasure is singing for the shut-ins on the Wednesday afternoon recitals.

Practice for forty minutes a day has been prescribed for him but, like a lot of other real lads, he does not always follow instructions and prefers to play. His teacher predicts he will either keep his present soprano voice or have a high baritone when his voice is ready to "change."

He is a pupil in the seventh grade public school and his parents will insist that he continue with his studies despite offers he has had to sing for various organizations.

VANDERBILT CHATEAU IN GOTHAM TO BE SOLD

Palatial Home in New York to Be Disposed of to Make Room For Business Block.

New York.—Another of the residential show places of society's "four hundred" on Fifth avenue is to be sold to make room for a business block.

Mrs. Alice G. Vanderbilt, widow of Cornelius Vanderbilt, asked the Supreme court's approval for the sale of the Vanderbilt chateau at Fifty-seventh street for $7,100,000. Since she came into possession of the property in 1899 the valuation has increased from $1,550,000 to $4,800,000, the petition states.

Taxes, which have risen from $38,446 to $129,120, she said, have become too burdensome.

The chateau itself is assessed at only $100,000, though it cost $3,000,000 when it was built and contains some of the most valuable art objects, French wood carvings and tapestries in the country. It was built in the style of the Chateau de Blois on the River Loire in France. There is a great central ballroom in the style of Louis XVI, surrounded by a series of private suites.

The buyer is reported to be G. Maurice Heckscher, son of August Heckscher, philanthropist. The approval of the court for the sale is necessary because Mrs. Vanderbilt merely has life use of the property. All the Vanderbilt heirs have approved the sale, the petition says. The court's order directing the heirs to show cause August 26 why the sale should not be permitted is regarded as a formality.

Mrs. Vanderbilt will move ten blocks up the avenue to the former home of George J. Gould.
